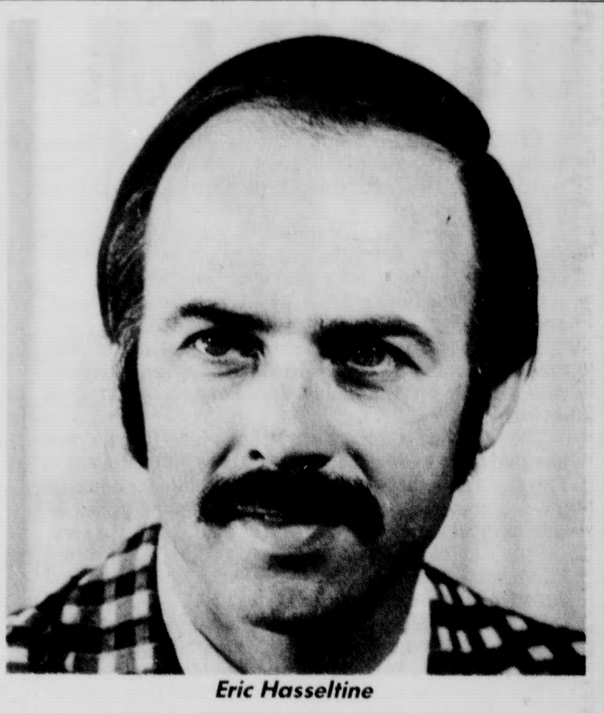
Hasseltine's campaign war chest

Supervisor has $17,000 fund in an off year



Eric Hasseltine

MARTINEZ — Supervisor Eric Hasseltine, Danville, who is not up for election this year, has amassed a treasury of $17,286 for a future campaign.

Supervisor Robert Schroder, Walnut Creek, reported he had $684 in leftover campaign funds, in the campaign finance reports for the six-month period from last July to December.

The other three county supervisors, Warren Boggess of Concord, Nancy Fahden of Martinez and James Kenny of Richmond, each reported they had neither collected nor spent over $200 in the off-year period.

Boggess and Kenny are up for re-election in June.

Hasseltine, whose fifth district covers the East County and the San Ramon Valley, reported he collected $12,937 in the six-month period to add to $9,413 he had previously collected.

Most of the income came from a $100 per person breakfast club which he formed last year for the purpose of raising campaign funds.

The $100 clubs are common practice among state legislators, but not so common among local elected officials at lesser levels.

Hasseltine's expenditures during the six-month period amounted to $1,590. These included $257 for the County Fair junior livestock auction, $372 for breakfast club expenses and the balance for campaign office expenses.

The Friends of Eric Hasseltine Committee, treasurer Kay D. Jones, Danville, reported these contributors of $100 or more, cumulative for 1977:

At $1,800 — Dame' Construction Co., developer, San Ramon; at $600 — Woodhill Development, Alamo.

At $450 — Geldermann Realtors, Danville; at $350 — G.L. Lewis Homes, Walnut Creek developers; at $300 — Ray P. Matthews, Walnut Creek realtor; Paul Cortese, Diablo investor.

At $250 — Tinning and DeLap, Walnut Creek, attorney firm for developers; Dana Murdock, attorney with Tinning and DeLap.

At $200 — C.M. Bloch, Danville developer; Wilbur Duberstein, Walnut Creek attorney; Tom Jackson, Alamo realtor; Western Title Insurance, Walnut Creek;

At $150 — Enrico Cinguini, Brentwood realtor. At $140 — Contra Costa Building and Construction Trades Council; Armand Dianda, Concord ranch-

Crippling results seen

Valley officials hit Jarvis tax reform

The proposed Jarvis amendment limiting property taxes in California would massively undercut the funding of Valley communities, according to officials in Pleasanton, Livermore and Dublin-San Ramon.

"Devastating," said Pleasanton mayor Bob Philcox and budget assistant Jim Walker.

"It will mean a dramatic dislocation of finances for public services and will cripple local activities, school activities and county activities," said Livermore's finance assistant George Nolan.

"The services that would have to be looked at first would be those that are not absolutely essential to the public health, welfare and safety," added Livermore city manager Bill Parness.

Rough estimates pegged Pleasanton's lost revenues at about $2 million if Jarvis passed with Livermore's between $1.5 million and $2 million.

Nolan noted the "double rollback" nature of the amendment that would return property assessments to the 1975-76 level then limit taxes to 1 percent of that value or $4 per $100 of full market value in 1975-76.

Philcox and Walker said Pleasanton would consider implications of the amendment in budget planning for 1978-79 but two separate budgets, one with Jarvis and one without, would not written.

However Dublin-San Ramon Community Services District general manager Paul Ryan said district staff had begun to study the possibilities and "we'll probably be preparing the budget on the basis of Jarvis and non-Jarvis."

"I would guess there would have to be emergency legislation of some kind. The state would have to step in. It could bankrupt the whole state — I don't know," Philcox said.

"The impact on local communities would be bad; impact on the state as a whole would be terrible because of long reaching effects on the sale of municipal bonds," he added.

Election day is June 6 and if passed, the tax limit would take effect July 1 which coincides with the beginning of most cities' fiscal year.

Take that — splash

LIVERMORE — A Bordeaux Street waterbed suffered a fatal blow last week when its owners differed on points of marital harmony and pierced the thin-skinned bag in its heart.

A woman called police and said she wanted an escort back home. Officers arrived at the home and found the woman's husband bailing water from the striken vessel.

He told police there had been a discussion during which he stabbed the waterbed with an unknown object, causing it to spurt forth its cargo.

Police also confiscated two partially disassembled sawed-off shotguns from the residence. No arrests were made.

Sewer plant demands

Castlewood race to comply

PLEASANTON — The Castlewood Country Club faces a tight deadline in its race to clean up its sewage plant before water and health agencies seek an injunction.

Friday, general manager Willard Lovens received a letter from the Regional Water Quality Control Board giving the club 21 days to comply with an abatement order issued Dec. 23.

"This matter will be referred to the Attorney General for injunction relief ... if complete compliance is not met within 21 days ...," the letter read.

Lovens also received a separate abatement order Thursday from the county Environmental Health Department warning of an injunction unless effluent overflow was stopped and steps to prevent future overflows were taken immediately.

Both the regional board and the county want management of the exclusive country club estates outside Pleasanton to repair leaking dikes and pipes and to lower the water level in effluent ponds to at least two feet below the rims.

Lovens says his staff began cleaning up the plant this week. Workers are dragging the ponds to clean out the bottoms, allowing the water to percolate. Crews are repairing dikes in a few areas, but are limited because of the effluent level. And Lovens is in the process of hiring a company to check for leaks in the plant's collection system.

The space between the water level and the top of dikes (known as freeboard) is down to one foot. Lovens is negotiating with the Dublin, San Ramon Services District, trying to get permission to pump one million gallons of effluent to the DSRSD plant, thereby dropping Castlewood's ponds to two feet freeboard space.

Legal complications, however, may prevent that. Lovens is still waiting for word from DSRSD.

The Castlewood plant, serving 120 homes off Foothill Road, began overflowing treated sewage water Jan. 16 during the heavy rains — almost three weeks after the original regional board abatement order.

County officials feared the overflow might get into Alameda Creek and then into Fremont drinking water. Health official Jerry Winn found no conclusive evidence of that in his tests, but those tests did not calm his worries.

"That effluent had to go somewhere. It was following natural water courses, thus probably would have gone into the creek or percolated into underground water supplies, which is just as bad.'

The long over-burdened Castlewood plant is owned and run by the homeowners association there. The cost of repairing and updating the plant lies on residents' shoulders, as would any legal action taken.

Restoration plan

Fund decision due for Ravenswood

LIVERMORE — Working with two members absent this Monday, the city council will consider financial assistance being requested by Ravenswood project to complete Phase 1 restoration on the venerable landmark home.

Councilmen Dale Turner and Glen Dahlbacka will be out of town this week, which also will delay any interviews for the planning commission vacancy scheduled to begin some time prior to the Monday night meeting.

Ravenswood project needs $147,500 to complete the first phase, Livermore Area Recreation and Park District (LARPD) board indicated in a letter to the council. The money is needed to award a bid to a contractor for the work. This work would be followed by roadway, walkway, exterior lighting, irrigation and minor improvements funded by the 1976 State Bond Act later this year and would allow use of the main house and the tank house (for a caretaker).

The LARPD directors, in their appeal to the city for finanacial assistance, pointed out in the letter that the project would fill a top priority community need for a public facility for civic, social, historical and cultural programs and functions.

City Manager Bill Parness will present the council with figures on the status of the "park fund," from which the LARPD is requesting the money. Under the current budget expenditures, projects and park improvements compared with revenue leaves only $32,394. The council will discuss the possibility of modifying or changing priorities if the Ravenswood project is deemed a high priority.

A public hearing will be held on the flood plain zoning tomorrow night.

Weather

Rain likely in the Valley today then a chance of rain tonight and Monday. Lows both days in the mid 40s to low 50s. Highs in the low to mid 60s. Light winds becoming southerly 10 to 20 mph today.

County split proposed

A couple of local officials reacted to an anonymous Hayward man's backstage poll on the notion of splitting Alameda County at the Oakland - San Leandro line. The theory is to drop costly welfare services from south county taxpayers, but as Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell observed, in practice it might not save any money.

Bedroom tax hike studied

Would an increased bedroom tax be the needed boost to Pleasanton's depleted capital improvement fund?

Council members are studying that question now. A staff report released late last week indicated the city would need at least $2,000 from each housing unit to pay for "necessary and probably necessary" capital improvement projects over the next 20 years.

Smog board openings

Persons interested in acting as judges over pollution violators have a chance to do so with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District.

The district's quasi - judicial Hearing Board has two vacancies, officials announced last week.

The positions are open to professional engineers and attorneys in the Bay area.

Anyone interested in applying should direct applications to the secretary of the Board of Directors, BAAPCD, 939 Ellis St., San Francisco, 94109. The deadline is Friday Feb. 17. For more information call 771-6000.

Police chief seekers respond

LIVERMORE — Five resumes have been submitted so far in the city's search for a new police chief, according to personnel director Ann Duncan.

Duncan said Friday that announcements have been sent out all over the United States in an effort to fill the vacancy created when Ronald Lindgren resigned mysteriously as police chief on Jan. 18.

City Manager Bill Parness said, "Anybody that is qualified in the Livermor Police Department is certainly welcome to submit an application. We're not denying them a chance at the position."

Parness told The Times that a new chief is expected to be hired by the beginning of May.

The brochure, which Duncan said was sent primarily to cities in the West, lists qualifications such as "the ability to establish effective relationships with the general public" as well as "the ability to analyze police problems, plan policies and procedures for law enforcement activities."

Duncan said the estimated salary will be set between $2,264 and $2,717 per month. Deadline for applications is March 17.

"After the initial screening," Duncan said, "only the most qualified applicants will be invited to participate in an assessment center process and/or an oral interview with a panel of experts." She said the "panel of experts" usually comes from outside the city.

The successful selected candidate will be asked to take a polygraph examination.

"Testing work should be done within a month of the screening," city manager Parness said, "This will be followed by another period of close examination of the finalists."

According to the brochure, each applicant must have at least three years of administrative experience

Dog injured by chemicals

LIVERMORE — A dog playing in a Sunset Drive backyard was severely burned last week when two youths allegedly poured swimming pool chemicals on it, police reported.

The dog's owners told police he let the animal into the backyard to defecate when he saw two neighboring youths looking over his fence at the dog. The youths threw a bucket of liquid on the animal, he said, and the dog yelped as the two boys laughed.

The owner wiped the liquid off but said the dog moaned for two days until taken to a veterinarian, who said the animal had suffered chemical burns on its back.

The two youths told officers they didn't like the dog but said they were not involved in the alleged attack. The dog's owner told police that the youths had teased the dog previously even though he kept the animal inside at most times.

Police arrested and booked two youths, aged 12 and 15, on suspicion of cruelty to animals. The case is under investigation.

PLEASANTON — A service station attendant sustained a broken nose when a customer slugged him in the face over a gas transaction dispute, police said.

The attendant said a black man drove into his station on Hopyard Road Thursday about 1:30 p.m. and requested $5 worth of gas. After dispensing the gas, the man said he had asked for only $4 worth of gas and wanted one dollar back.

The attendant refunded a dollar and reportedly told the man to "enjoy your dollar's worth of gas." An argument ensued and the attendant was struck.

Police picked up a suspect in San Leandro based on a vehicle license number supplied by the victim. The man drove back to Pleasanton and gave police a statement saying he had been provoked by a racial slur.

The incident is under investigation. No arrests were made.

DUBLIN — Building materials valued at $542 were taken from 84 Lumber at 5777 Scarlett Court Thursday, the sheriff's department reported.

Burglars apparently cut a chain to enter the property but deputies could not find a point of entry into the building. Employees reported that 24 boxes of nails, 2,500 suare feet of roofing tiles and six rolls of asphalt felt were missing.

The burglary is under investigation.

LIVERMORE — A Palm Street resident told police he saw a young man running down the street with his toolbox containing $300 in tools, police reported.

The resident said he heard noises early Friday and saw a blond youth aged 15-17 years running from the pick-up truck in his driveway. He gave chase but couldn't locate the youth.

LIVERMORE — A car parked in a Norma Way apartment parking lot lost its wheels to burglars last week, police reported.

Burglars had unscrewed a security light in the carport area, placed the car on concrete blocks and removed four steel radial tires mounted on stock rims.

The loss was set at $300. There are no suspects.

LIVERMORE — Burglars entered a second story Cordoba Street apartment Thursday through a partially-open window and stole $300 in valuables, police reported.

Thieves had slit open a window screen to get at the open window. Missing items include a man's watch, twin lens reflex camera and some insurance papers. There are no suspects.

LIVERMORE — Burglars entered an unlocked building at Joe Michell School on Elaine Avenue Wednesday and took several valuables, police reported.

Small change was missing from a coffee machine that had been pried open. Missing items include a typewriter, cassette recorder, and some plants.

At the scene police found a wallet with identification belonging to a student at the school. An investigation into the burglary is ongoing.

LIVERMORE — A railroad - style pocket watch and a diamond - silver necklace were stolen from an Olivina Avenue home recently, police reported.

No signs of force were discovered. The theft is being investigated.

CARD members

Pipeline foes ask court injunction

HAYWARD — Four CARD members filed suit in Alameda County Superior Court late Friday asking for a temporary injunction to stop the expenditures of any public funds for the $28 million sewage export pipeline project.

The plaintiffs, Paul Tull, John Fraga, Thurman Caudill and Livermore City Council write-in candidate David Eller, filed the civil taxpayers' law suit at 4:55 p.m. Friday. Tull will act as counsel for the plaintiffs.

Named as defendants were city council members of Pleasanton and Livermore, directors of the Dublin San Ramon Service District, and staff of the Livermore Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA).

Eller said LAVWMA Director Bob Philcox was shown a copy of the complaint late Friday.

This, he said, makes LAVWMA "morally obligated" to mention the suit when its members ask New York financial experts tomorrow to rate $4.2 million in bonds being sold to finance the project's local share costs.

LAVWMA financial consultants had earlier said that previous CARD actions could raise the interest rates and possibly cost Valley residents an additional $500,000 in interest payments over the bonds' 20-year life. The suit could force the rate even higher, Eller said, and will put more pressure against the project which is slated to begin construction next month.

The suit says that the defeat of Measure U on the November, 1976 ballot, which asked for approval to sell bonds to finance a larger but similar project, was proof of public dissatisfaction with the pipeline. This feeling was compounded when LAVWMA amended its charter to no longer require public approval of the project, the suit claims.

Eller said the suit was filed because "the four of us (plaintiffs) believe that not enough unbiased study went into the project" and that the injunction "would restore the peoples' voice in government."

The cities and LAVWMA, he said, are "cramming the project down our throats."

The suit asks that the planned February 22 date to open bidding on the bonds be indefinitely postponed and that design and construction work be halted, Eller said. The defendants would be asked to show cause why the injunction should not be granted.

LAVWMA would be officially served with a copy of the complaint tomorrow, Eller said. He expected court action on the suit in about a week.

County may alter lot split policy

HAYWARD — Alameda County's agricultural lot - splitting laws ought to be tightened a bit to prevent certain splits, the county staff has recommended to the planning commission.

The commission has the item on the agenda for tomorrow's meeting at 1:30 p.m. at 399 Elmhurst, but because the 10 page report was mailed Friday, it's not known if commissioners will have time to digest it for a discussion tomorrow.

The report recommends three types of agricultural districts be established.

One would be areas of prime agricultural soil located near urban areas. Depending on the productivity of the land, the minimum size could be as low as 20 acres without a house on it. (A house still would need a 100 acre minimum in an agricultural zone).

The second category would be low capability soils with existing improved access. If that policy were standing a few weeks ago, a request for the Sinbad 720 lot split in Sunol would have been defeated (it was anyway) because it does not have "existing" improved access.

That policy also would have killed a split into 13 lots last year on the Wagner Ranch for the same reason.

The third category would be areas of low capability soils and no improved public access. There would be a 100 acre minimum, but no house would be allowed on that size. A rancher or farmer would need a 320 acre minimum to create a parcel for building a house. The idea is to encourage family farming and discourage any kind of large lot rural residential speculation in a district supposedly reserved exclusively for agriculture.

The report also will go to the county's agricultural advisory committee Feb. 15 and later to the board of supervisors.

Livermore squeeze

Friday was not a lucky day for parked vehicles in Livermore. Within a four-hour period two parked vehicles were badly damaged in unrelated accidents. A pickup parked on N. Livermore Avenue near Portola Avenue was hit by a car driven by Charles Edward Birdsong, 29, when he failed to change lanes soon enough to avoid the collision, according to the California Highway Patrol. In a spectacular spin-out accident about 3:30 p.m. a westbound station wagon driven by Mrs. Judy Szabo was struck in the right rear side and spun around on Second Street before ploughing into a parked pickup truck (photo above). The owner of the parked Chevy vehicle, Bob Moorefield of Pleasanton, was in a store at the time of the accident. His truck was wedged between the station wagon and a tree.

Tax plan poses fund threat

"If it does pass there will be a mad scramble (until the end of June) because there won't be anyone around after that," Walker half-joked.

As for city programs, "Programs mean people," said Parness.

"You'll either change all of them or eliminate whole groups of them," said Walker.

Personnel costs account for 70 to 80 percent of the operating budgets in both cities.

Parness noted ambiguities in the amendment could make implementation difficult if it passed, particularly the provision requiring the counties to disburse all property tax-generated revenues to "districts" within their jurisdiction.

"The word 'districts' is used, not cities, and there are different interpretation of what that means," he said.

"One is that the cities would get nothing and districts would mean school districts or special purpose districts (like DSRSD)," he added.

"Another interpretation is that cities would not come under coverage of the law because we're not specifically defined in it," he noted.

"But if it does pass there will be very, very serious financial consequences," he stated.

Remodeling at Santa Rita

OAKLAND — Santa Rita will get a remodeled booking office for approximately $70,000, a saving over the estimated $500,000 a new one would have cost.

The state wanted the county to build a brand new booking office to replace the old, cramped one now in use.

Bringing it up to state standards would have cost $500,000. Since the Oakland jail will be ready in three years and the flow into Santa Rita will be reduced drastically then, the county thought it foolish to build a new booking office from the ground up.

With the state's permission, the county decided last week to scrounge old wood from demolished buildings at Santa Rita, get some inmate labor on the job, and keep costs to around $70,000 for the remodeling job. The sheriff's department said the remodeled facility should be ready in 18 months.

Workshop for aging

Ministry to the Aging Through Community Help (MATCH) will sponsor a workshop featuring several prominent local speakers on the impact of Gail Sheehy's best selling book, "Passages."

The event will be held Saturday, Feb. 11 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Presbyterian Church, 2020 Fifth St., Livermore. The panel will consist of the Rev. Shirley F. Woods, assistant to the Rector, St. Bartholomew's, geriatrics specialists E.F. Schmerl and Russell Lee, and moderator the Rev. Norman Calloway, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church.

MATCH, which is sponsoring the event, is a volunteer organization which has a planned program for coordinating people from the community who wish to give one hour weekly to visiting and befriending convalescent home patients. For information, call Audrey Cedarlund at 447-2573 ot Elaine Storms at 447-8050.

Rec dept. plans meeting

DUBLIN — The Dublin San Ramon Services District Recreation Department is hosting a get acquainted meeting tomorrow at 4 p.m. at Shannon Center for district residents interested in participating in a volunteer program.

The recreation department will train and orientate those interested in joining the program.

Children (minimum age 14), older teens, adults and senior citizens are encouraged to share their special skills, interests, hobbies and time with others in the district.

Examples of the programs in which volunteers will be assisting include: teen activities, senior citizens events, special sports events (track meets, big wheel races, cross country, etc.), aquatics programs, clerical work and many other areas.

For further information call 828-7711.

New swim clinic plan

DUBLIN — The Swim Clinic for teens sponsored by the Dublin San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) Recreation Department has a new schedule.

All schools swim from 5:45 to 7 p.m. at the Valley Community Swim Center, 9157 Village Parkway next to Dublin High School. The schedules are as follows:

Monday: Wells and Frederiksen. Tuesday: Pine Valley, Cal High and Frederiksen. Wednesday: Pine Valley and Cal High. Thursday: Wells and Frederiksen. Friday: Wells, Pine Valley and Cal High.

Swim meets are scheduled for Feb. 25, March 25, April 29 and May 20. All meets start at 10 a.m.

A Swim banquet will be held May 27. It starts at 4:30 with a minimum cost dinner. An awards presentation will also be held. Each swimmer may bring their family and/or one friend.

For further information, call 828-7711 or 829-2828 and ask for Ron or Allen.

Free programs available

DUBLIN — Free aquatics programs are available at Valley Community Swim Center in 80 degree water under the sponsorship of the Dublin San Ramon Services District Recreation Department.

Dressing areas are also heated.

However, the swim center will be closed temporarily Feb. 4 and 5 due to an Amateur Athletic Union Swim Meet hosted by Bay Aquatics.

Lessons in swimming, diving, scuba diving, exercising and much more are scheduled to begin throughout the coming months.

Lap swimming is held Monday through Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m.

Saturdays and Sundays the lap swimming schedule is from noon to 1 p.m.

Recreational Swimming is Saturday and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m.

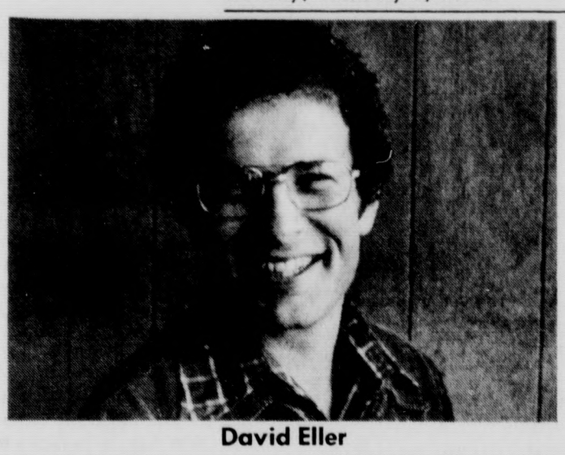
City council sold us down the river—Eller



David Eller

LIVERMORE — David Eller calls himself an independent conservationist in this election. As the first official write-in candidate for the city council, Eller emphasizes he is not a no-growth advocate, but advocates growth of industry rather than population here.

His concerns range from the pipeline to trees, from historical preservation to the budget and the new city hall.

While describing the old city hall as a "distinguished building that adds to the city's dignity," he views the new architectural design as "a monstrous mess of monolithic masonry." He sees no reason for building on the council chambers, which he describes as "really excess luxury."

"I don't see why they can't continue to use the present chambers," says the 35-year-old Chabot College student.

As for the design, "it should be something that reflects Livermore, the Spanish design, grape arbors, along that line." His plan would be to use the money to purchase the old Livermore sanitarium, now site of the Pentecostal Bible College, with its established greenery and trees.

Eller feels the buildings could be renovated and utilized effectively and city business could be conducted in close proximity. "I think letting the Bible College and its potential slip through our hands in later years will prove to be a very bad thing," he reflects.

But Eller directs much of his campaign enthusiasm against the pipeline, which he feels should be the main issue of the year. "I think the present city council has stolen our rights to vote from us, sold us down the river and pulled the rug out from under us on this question," he says.

"Livermore voted down the pipeline project and the funding required for it. If there was any question as to what exactly we voted against, pipe size or bonds or whatever, they should have put it on a new ballot," he insists.

If he were on the council, Eller declares, "Even if I were just one vote I would at least speak out and I would go to Sacramento, I would visit and lobby as much as posible as a member of the council on my own behalf."

Additionally he would ask for another vote on the pipeline, "even though I may get voted down." He adds emphatically, "I would do everything I could to stop this project until the people had a right to vote on it."

Eller has lived in Livermore since 1958, with time out for Vietnam duty with the Navy and several years of working in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Nebraska.

He feels the basic idea behind the insulation ordinance was good, but he objects to the way the council handled it. "I don't believe a person should be told, via big government 1984, that we must insulate our homes prior to selling it," he says. "I feel it's important to have promotion and encourage people to put insulation in their homes and other methods of conserving energy, maybe using a tax credit."

Eller also opposes the walls surrounding new developments. "We have a walled city that looks like a prison in many areas," he says. "If I were on the council I would encourage removing some of the walls and would vote against putting up any further walls," he says.

Another example of the barriers in the city, he says, is the "prison wall" erected at the back of Safeway's center by P Street. He thinks the design of the entire center could have been better, but feels the wall impedes open accessibility between that center and Alpha Beta.

"I think what the problem was not enough independence of the council members versus what Southern Pacific and their architects wanted. I would speak up and voice my opinions in council," he asserts.

A firm believer in "local jobs for local people," Eller believes there are enough people in Livermore to support more industry without bringing in a large influx of people.

On the subject of the I580 diamond lanes, Eller recommends two riders per car instead of the three-per-car stipulation now being enforced. "We must encourage additional use of the diamond lanes or their future is very dim," he believes. Two-per-car would benefit those people with small sports cars and trucks that have room for only two people, he says.

Keenly interested in preservation, Eller says he is very interested in recycling old buildings. "This helps protect the national resources by slowing the cutting down of trees for more lumber," he believes. "I feel in the future the building industry is going to have to be retrained to recycle or rennovate old buildings rather than letting them decay as they do in some areas now."

He is for the bus system, but would prefer mini-buses. And he would like to see a stronger tree ordinance," but taking into consideration the rights of the property owners. "He would suggest a cooperative effort by the park and tree department to maintain the larger trees to spare the property owner the excessive cost.

Finally, on the budget," I would cut the fat and fry it," says the city council hopeful. "I would ask the city manager when he submitted the budget, if he only had 75 per cent of the money, what would he axe?"

Water use to stay low

SAN RAMON — East Bay Municipal Utilities District (EBMUD) speculates that water use since rationing was lifted last week will remain at least 15 percent lower than it was before the drought.

According to EBMUD, this means that Contra Costa County residents have learned that they don't need to use as much water as they have in the past.

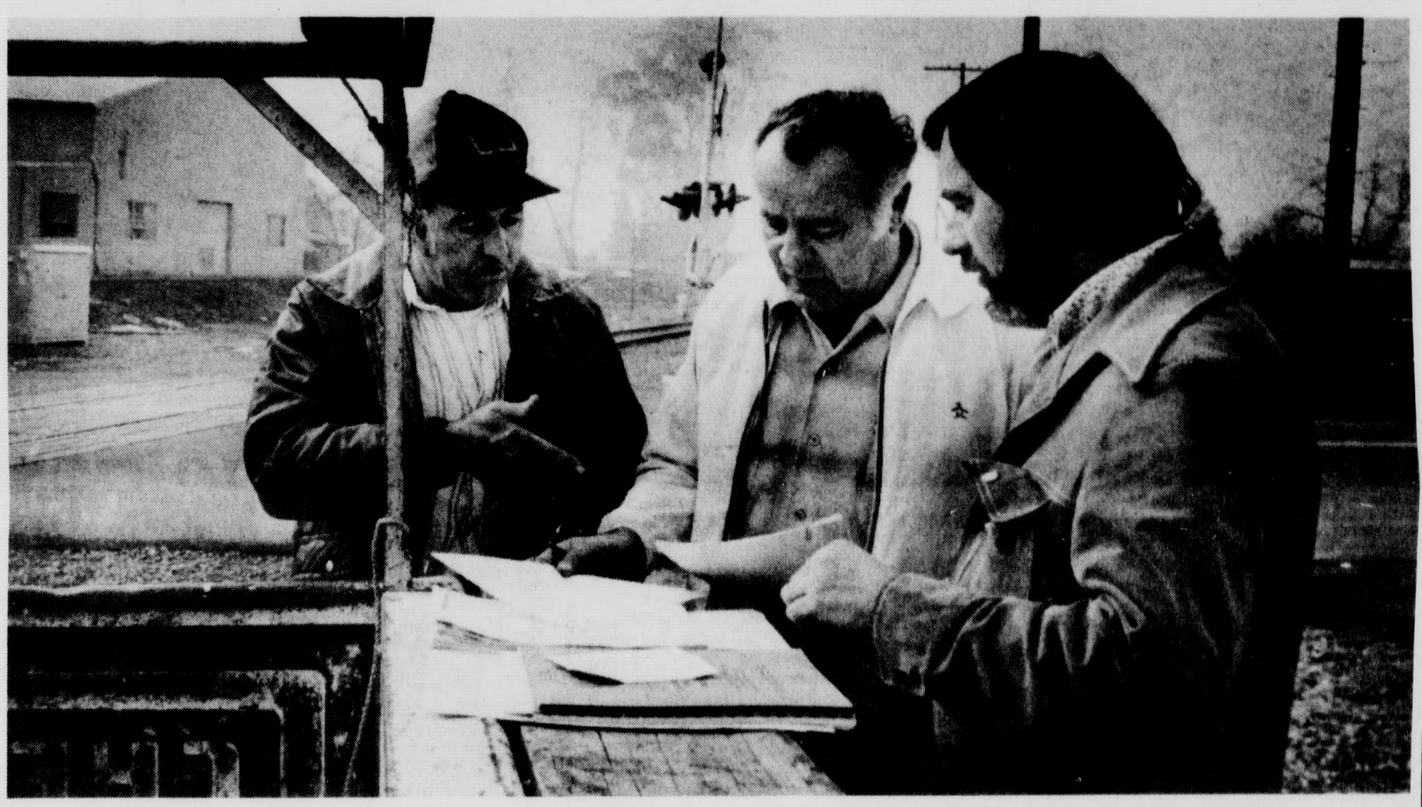
Figures indicate that for the first two days of the rationing lift, East Bay MUD taps only consumed an average of 123 million gallons per day. This is less than half of the amount of water consumed during pre-rationing days. The month of June, 1976 accounted for an average of 287 million gallons of water used per day — whereas a peak rationing month such as December last year only accounted for 110 million gallons per day on the average.

One of EBMUD's chief customers, the San Ramon Valley School District, does not plan to change their format for water use even though rationing is not in effect.

Assistant business manager for the school district, Jack Hussey commented on their "strong program" to conserve water. "It certainly is the goal of our educational program to keep encouraging water conservation at home as well as at school," Hussey said.

"And, we will continue using wells to water football fields," he added.

Frank Jones of the school district's grounds department said, however, "If we don't get a rain this week, the sprinklers will probably have to be turned on again." Jones said the heavy rains during January allowed groundskeepers to activate sprinklers only a few minutes each day as a maintenance check.



Smoothing the edges

Making the rocky road smooth. Robert Keller, John Buranis and Chris Trudeau (from left to right above) go over plans to improve Spring Street in Pleasanton near the railroad tracks. The city expects to close the upper portion of the street for at least two days next week as construction crews pave the road and connect the sidewalks on either side of the tracks. The federal government is funding 90 percent of the $9,900 project as part of the US road safety program.

Lecture on fitness

SAN RAMON — "Physical Fitness for Everyone" is the subject of this month's Health Dialogue Series at the Family Medical Center Thursday beginning at 10 a.m.

The fitness program will cover the importance of exercises, different types of exercise, how and why to exercise properly, cardiovascular risk factors, and how exercising can reduce the possiblility of heart disease.

Color slides will illustrate the discussion and a question and answer period will be included.

Gary Renner, M.D., and John McCracken, associate executive in charge of physical education at Mt. Diablo YMCA, will present the program.

Renner, a general practitioner, has taught sports medicine at the University of California at Berkeley. He has also served as team doctor for local sporting events and has presented programs for the Heart Association.

McCracken has worked with cardiovascular exercise programs and has been affiliated with the YMCA for eight years.

Sponsored by the Family Medical Center, the monthly Health Dialogue Series is designed to promote understanding of many common illnesses and health problems.

Chabot course change studied

The South County Community College District board will discuss proposed course and curriculum changes for 1978-79 at their meeting Tuesday.

Board members convene at 7:30 p.m. in Building 200 of Chabot College in Hayward.

Trustees are also scheduled to consider policy on rules regarding transfer of units, academic renewal, procedure for selection of a student member of the board, and act on an agreement for lease of storage facilities at the Chabot College bookstore.

A report is also due on a revised forensics schedule for 1977-78.

Look at textbook selection

Textbook selection will be discussed at the next meeting of the Valley Education Advisory Committee Thursday, Feb. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Amador/Pleasanton school district offices.

The committee is an advisory panel to Assemblyman Floyd Mori.

The county schools office will begin the evening with a brief slide show on the current process used to select textbooks.

Mori will also bring committee members up to date on legislation before the Assembly Education Committee. But Mori opines, in this regard, that the committee may go along with Assemblyman Dennis Mangers' suggestions and have a moratorium on further major educational reform legislation this session.

School, employer link sought

A new employment placement service is available to Bay Area businesses through the Valley Employment and Training Program at no cost to client or employer.

Applicants are screened and tested. Participants receive job counseling and tutoring in areas where skills need upgrading. The ultimate goal of the program is to identify the needs of employers and then train people to fill those needs. Employers are urged to call the program office at 462-1615, ext. 65, between 8:30 a.m. and noon and express what type of training they feel is needed in our community.

It is not necessary for the employer to have a job opening — his input is what's important. The main thrust of this program is to build an employment liaison between schools and employers.

Training for youths

The Valley Employment and Training Program is developing two training programs in job areas where the employment outlook is good — the clerical and upholstery fields.

An intensive clerical program is planned which will offer training in typing, shorthand, business machines and general office procedures.

The upholstery training will teach participants the skills necessary to qualify for jobs in that field.

Interested in our political heritage? Plan to share an evening of fun and interest with Frank Cherry who has one of the most outstanding private collections of political memorabilia in the country.

League of Women Voters, social studies buffs and politically conscious students will be particularly interested in the lecture and display of artifacts of political campaigns.

The event is free to the public and is scheduled Tuesday in Room B-13 at Harvest Park School on Valley Avenue in Pleasanton. The program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Murray trustees to pick colleague

Murray School District board members will hold deliberations prior to appointing the new board member Monday night at Wells Intermediate School in Dublin.

Candidates for the board position vacated by Bob Foster include David Melander, Tom McCormick, Linda Cooley, Harry Molz and John Bird.

The deliberations towards the appointment will begin at approximately 9 p.m. The board meeting begins at 8 o'clock Monday.

The person appointed on a provisional basis would serve the remainder of Foster's unexpired term which continues through March of 1979.

Trustees will initially act on noon supervisors' compensation, a series of policies related to Assembly Bill 65, social studies instructional materials, hear a curriculum and instruction report on art, implications on a reduction in force because of projected enrollment figures, and the Jarvis initiative.

Previous plans to formally interview candidates for the board position have been cancelled, present board members feeling they gained sufficient background information at a candidates forum last Monday night.

Bird is a Captain in the U.S. Army and is chief of administration and logistics for the Army's District Recruiting Command in Alameda. A resident of Briarwood Lane in Dublin, Bird attended the University of Nebraska at Omaha, one year of law school, is married and has four children.

He has been active in the Murray School PTA.

Mrs. Cooley, a resident of the Val Vista section of Pleasanton, previously ran for the Murray board. She has been active in district and Donlon School affairs.

Married and the mother of two children, she is presently a title examiner for Transamerica Title and has lived in Pleasanton four years.

Molz has resided in Dublin 12 years and operates Realty World in Dublin. He and his wife have seven children. He previously ran for the Murray board last March.

David Melander is unit supervisor of nine deputy probation officers for the Alameda County Probation Department. He has worked in the probation department since 1965. He holds a B.A. in sociology from Cal Berkeley, has been president of the Highland Oaks Homeowners Assc., active in Lydiksen School affairs, married with three children.

Tom McCormick is a community contracts coordinator in the county administrator's office. He has held that position since 1973 and has a total of 17 years of operational and management-level experience.

A former teacher and school principal in Tulare County, McCormick and his wife reside in Dublin. They have a daughter at Dublin High School and three that attended Murray and Amador Valley schools.

Monday night's trustee deliberations will be public, as specified by law.

SR board eyes year-round unit

DANVILLE — The San Ramon Valley Unified School District board will consider appointing another citizens' advisory committee to study year-round schools Monday, which could trigger a presentation from the Twin Creeks Parents Concerned About Year-Round Schools.

Trustees convene at the Education Center, 699 Old Orchard Dr., at 7:30 p.m.

The board last month decided to sidetrack implementation of a year-round schools pilot project for 1978-79 after previously accepting the report of a YRS citizens' committee last fall. The district then named a coordinator for yearround schools, Bud Lowrey, towards the possibility of starting program at several district schools on July 1.

The schools included Twin Creeks, Montevideo, Green Valley and Walt Disney.

But a poll by Lowrey showed that approximately 60 per cent of parents in the four school areas did not want a year-round schools program.

The Twin Creeks committee was formed a few weeks prior to the Jan. 23 board meeting and, as it turned out, was instrumental in a majority of parents voting against YRS.

Trustees are scheduled to receive a letter from David F. Leonard of the group at Monday's meeting. The presentation, possibly by Jan Shank, may follow.

In addition to the YRS question, the board will also act on shortrange capital outlay needs, hear a food services report, discuss the Del Amigo High School program, the Jarvis-Gann Initiative, and take action on three items related to either the Developer Impact Policy or the Developer Impact Fund.

The first of the latter involves use of unbudgeted revenues from the capital fund. The administration will recommend authorizing the increase of revenues and expense for sale of sites and Developer Impact Policy in the general fund.

The administration will also recommend the board transfer all Develper Impact Policy allocations in the general fund to the inter-fund transfer account for subsequent transfer to the Developers Impact Fund.

CCC energy demands soar along with resource costs

MARTINEZ — The major issue in the expansion of public utility delivery systems in Contra Costa County is to minimize degradation of the physical environment while meeting increasing demands for energy.

According to the latest county profile prepared by the county planning department, there are three factors involved in raising per capita energy consumption to such a high level that resource exploration and development to provide adequate supplies is increasingly difficult and costly.

The three factors are a growing population, greater levels of economic activity and demands for more consumable items.

This has increased the costs of electric and gas supplies to record levels.

Natural gas rates to local county residents, which includes San Ramon, have increased 205 per cent from 1970 to 1975. The overall general consumer price inflation increase was less than 40 per cent.

The disposal of solid wastes has also become a major issue in recent years. This is due to population increases and the "throw away" nature of packaging materials.

These factors have raised per capita levels of solid waste generation.

The lack of capacity at some disposal sites in the county has also intensified local problems.

With natural resource depletion becoming a critical problem, the recovery of usable materials from solid wastes is likely to become a major industry.

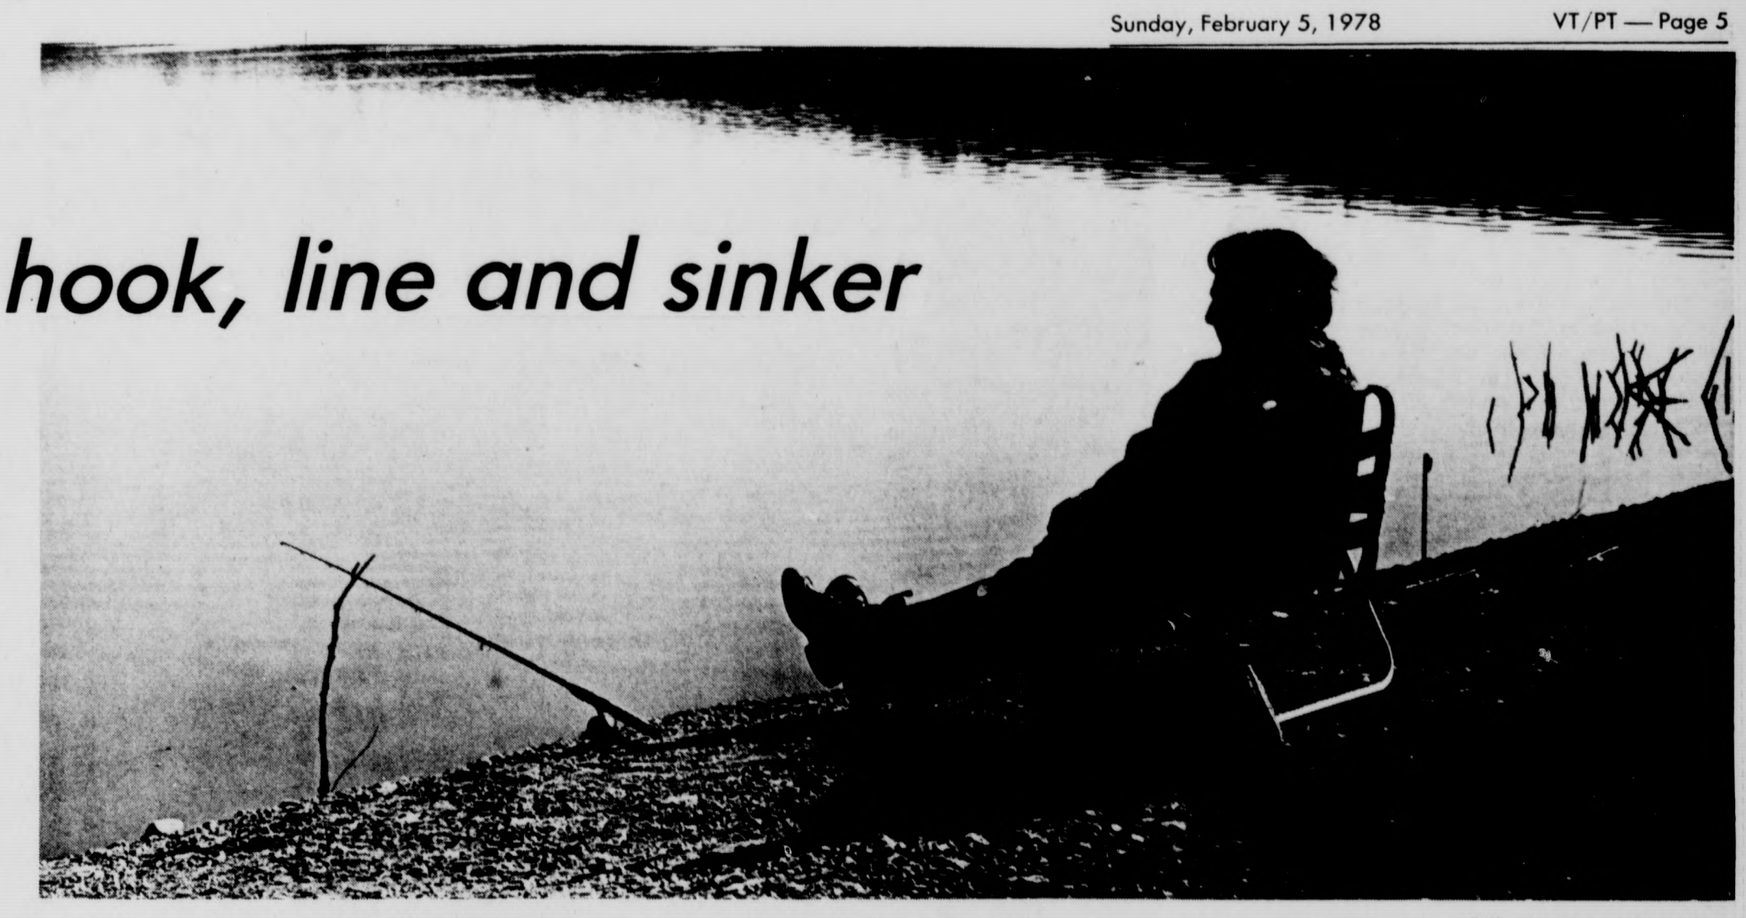
Relaxation: hook, line and sinker



Bill Mages (above) illustrates one of the finer points to fishing.

Story and photos by Marie Felde

Gravel trucks rumble by. Cars maneuver to make the best time between Livermore and Pleasanton. Even the freight trains hardly slow down at the East Pleasanton Station. But, not 20 feet off of East Stanley Boulevard there is a haven for people who take their time.

Retirees. Students on semester break. Philosophers. Collectively, call them fishermen.

On almost any busy weekday you can find a handful of them at Shadow Cliffs Regional Park tossing in their lines, sitting back, day dreaming and doing anything but rushing.

You can't rush fish. Mornings these days maybe 10 ro 20 of the sleek rainbow trout will risk their lives for a nibble on a piece of pink salmon egg or a stale mini marshmallow.

Even the fish that don't get away "aren't what you'd call braggin size." That's according to Alta Ochs, who has been fishing with her husband Paul since they bought their first house together in San Leandro for $5000. "It was a little high, but we told ourselves there was a war on."

"I been fishing about 30 years, since I married him," says Alta, motioning to a man sitting in a lawn chair wearing an identical cap to her own of age-worn red leather.

"I wasn't about to stay home by myself," she adds with a wink and another look in his direction.

Alta had been doing about the best of the seven fishermen out one morning — she'd caught three fish in as many hours. Her technique "Just toss the line out there and pray."

But she really wasn't too concerned about landing a big one. "Fishing to me is being outdoors, not just catching fish. It's watching the birds and getting fresh air."

She adds that her husband doesn't even like to eat fish. Well, who cleans them then? "He does. You know, I've always felt a little guilty about that."

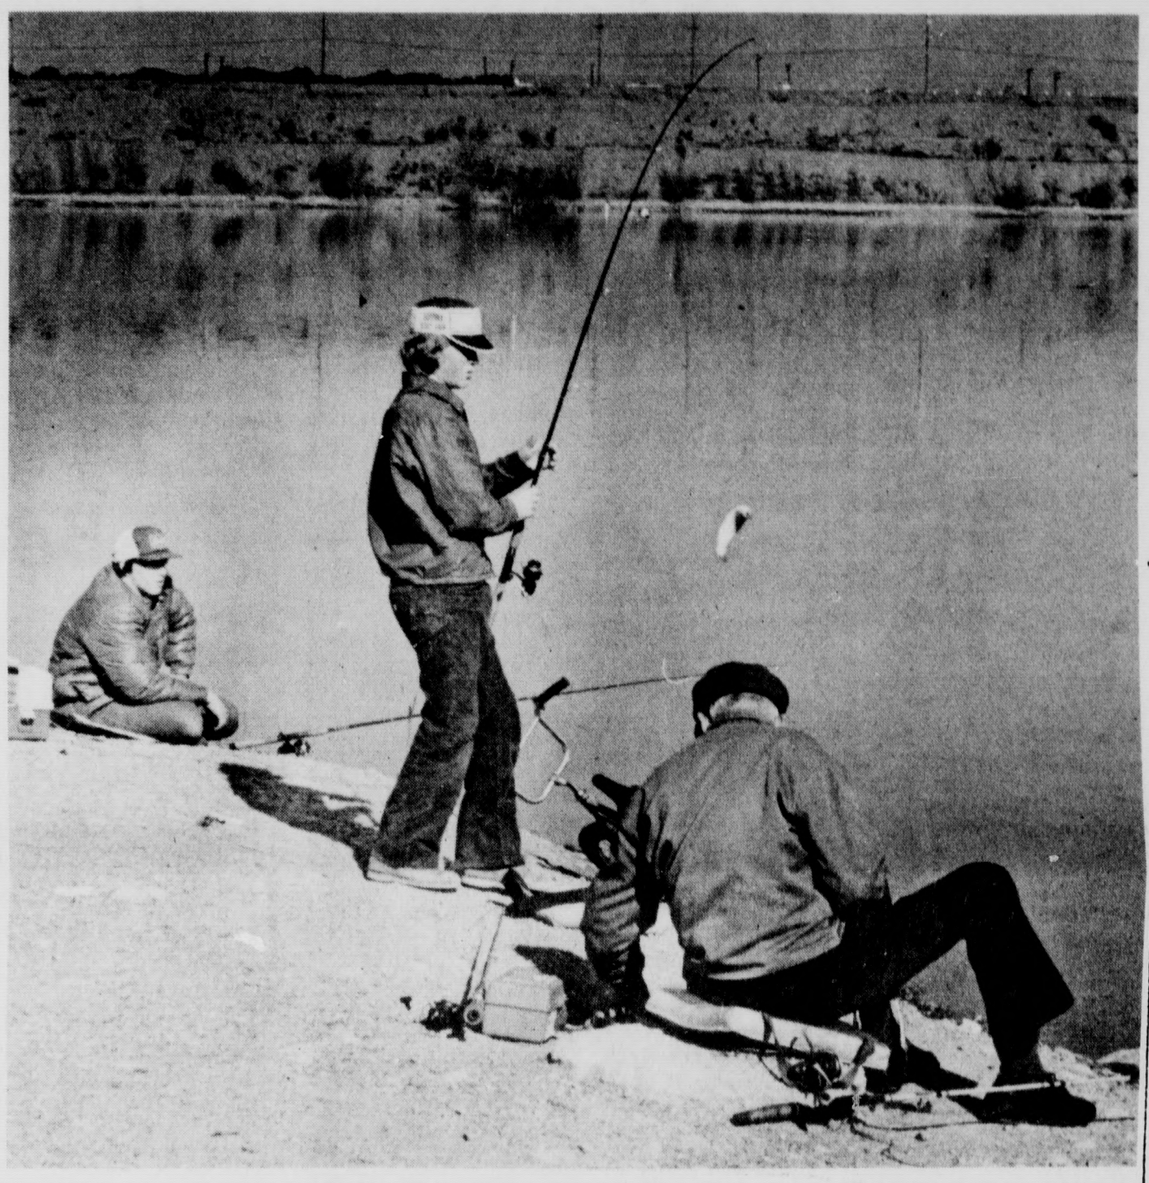
Fifteen year-old Scott Minaker has to clean his own fish. He likes fishing because, "It's fun. You can catch your own food and it takes up time."

Scott had a little extra time on his hands because it was finals week at Amador High School and "we get out at 10:45." He'd been out a Shadow Cliffs less than two hours and had hauled in two trout. His total count so far for finals week was 12.

Bill Mages was as interested in not catching fish as Scott was in catching them. "I really don't want to catch a fish — I'd have to get out of my chair," he said half seriously. The San Ramon resident retired after 31 years with the Oakland Fire Department.

After the recent rains it was too wet for Mages to play golf, his other recreation, so he brought his gear down to Shadow Cliffs. "I was told when I was 22 that a guy who fishes will live 10 years longer. You know who told me? My father, and he lived to be about 90."

Not a whole lot of the nearly 5000 fish planted at Shadow Cliffs in January were being very cooperative, but for those like Alta Ochs it makes little difference. "Time," she says, "doesn't mean very much to us."



Scott Minaker (left) caught one, his associates were not so fortunate.

Women's commission looks at Santa Rita

Houchins says there's no room at Santa Rita right now to hold coed classes.

OAKLAND — Curious about whether educators at Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center are encouraging sex role stereotypes in learning, the county's Commission on the Status of Women has written to Sheriff Tom Houchins.

The commission is not being critical, but wants information on the county's procedures for guiding men and women into the high school and college classes offered at the county jail.

Kate Quick, the commission's staff person, said that the catalogue shows a class like auto tech or fire science being offered only to men and a class like early childhood development offered only to women. Those are obvious links with society's expectations for men and women, but some people may want to cross over and take classes that supposedly appeal only to one sex, said Quick.

Coeducational classes, where one might find 15 men and two women in a "men's specialty" class, are impossible right now at Santa Rita, Sheriff Tom Houchins told The Times.

Classes for each sex are held in the respective barracks area and the sexes are kept totally segregated at Santa Rita 24 hours a day.

"I don't have any room right now where we could have coed classes, but I would have no objection to that once we have a new facility," said Houchins. "To cope in the present atmosphere of this facility would either mean a breach of security or a need for excessive officer time."

It is not known when the new Santa Rita will be built, but it will include "neutral ground" where coed classes could take place, said Houchins.

As far as signing up women for "men's classes" and vice-versa is concerned, that's up to the school districts involved, said the sheriff.

At the college level, where most of the diverging "sex role" classes like "Early Childhood Development" occur, Chabot College does the teaching and shares counseling duties with the sheriff's special correctional staff.

Irv Batz, who works on the program for Chabot, said that Chabot classes are taught on a six week cycle. The "short semester" (the number of class hours per week are doubled) was established because of the relatively rapid turnover of inmates at the jail.

Two weeks after a course begins, Chabot surveys the students to see what they would sign up for in the next cycle. That tells Chabot what it ought to offer.

Presumably if enough women signed up for auto tech or some other traditionally male class, they would be taught that class in their own quarters.

The classes are supported by state Average Daily Attendance (ADA) money and it's up to the sheriff's department to determine the cutoff point, said Batz.

Andrew Ford, who heads the jail's educational counseling efforts, was away at a professional convention in San Francisco and unavailable for comment on that point when The Times called him last week.

Scouts here to celebrate

Scouts taking a look at these patches are Greg Hackett, David Bone who is a Twin Valley District Executive, Howard Clark and (back row) Cathy Childers and Lloyd Chapman.

Boy Scouts in the Valley are celebrating the 68th anniversary of their organization this month with programs and displays at local schools, churches, libraries and shopping centers.

The Boy Scout movement was founded in Great Britain in 1907 by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, who firmly believed that people should try to "do a good turn daily."

Since that time more than 50 million Americans have joined Scouting USA. Worldwide, there are 69 countries with a scouting program.

The Twin Valley District, serving Livermore, Dublin and Pleasanton offers a variety of programs.

The Cub Scout program is for boys 8 to 11 years old. There are 28 Cub packs locally which serve 1042 scouts. For information about this program, call Joan Wells at 828-5810.

Boys 11 to 18 are eligible for membership in Boy Scouts. There are 23 troops in the Valley with a membership of 659. For information on this program, call Hal Wislon at 846-8766.

Explorer Scouts offer a variety of programs for young men and women age 15 to 20. The programs include sailing, backpacking, aviation and law enforcement. There are 280 scouts in the Valley Explorer programs, one third of whom are girls. Call Shirleen Hale at the San Franciso office, Enterprise 1-3133, for details.

In addition to the year-round scout programs, Twin Valley District offers many special events which include a Camporee, Cub Scout Day Camp, Pinewood perby, Winter Camp, Kite Derby, Fun Fair and Good Turn Day.

The Twin Valley pistrict is third out of 10 districts in the Bay Area in the number of members who have earned the rank of Eagle, the highest achievement in scouting.

Bedroom tax could go up

PLEASANTON — City council is taking the first peek at the idea of increasing the city's bedroom tax.

Council received a report on the subject Thursday, several days after elected officials struck a provision from the proposed growth plan allowing developers to receive points for cash contributions to the capital improvement fund.

Vice-mayor Ken Mercer asked for the report, claiming giving points to developers for cash was a subtle form of blackmail and not the way the city should go about building up capital improvement funds.

Currently, the most any builder has to pay in bedroom taxes is $45 for one bedroom and no more than $105 for five bedrooms in one house.

The staff report presented last week indicated the city would need to raise approximately $2,000 from each housing unit over the next 20 years in order to pay for "necessary and probably necessary projects."

That figure doesn't take into account inflation or street repair work, according to staff.

Bedroom tax funds now are used for park improvements.

Mercer said during one council session several weeks ago that he was interested in studying the feasibility of increasing the tax to $500 per bedroom. But last week's staff report didn't address that figure.

The report was just the first of many steps council would have to take before increasing the tax. Although individual council members have stressed they haven't yet decided anything definite, they are all interested in the possibility of increasing the tax to add money to the city's depleted capital improvement fund.

Last week council also cleared away confusion and uncertainty pertaining to future low-income housing here.

In two unanimous votes, council set guidelines and incentives for subsidized housing in the residential allocation program.

The action came several days after council had deleted three low-income housing sections from the proposed growth management plan. A section mandating developers build at least one out of every 10 rental units for lower-income tenants was struck Monday by a 4-1 vote (Joyce LeClaire supporting) and remains out of the plan.

But two incentives previously cut were revised and reinstated Thursday. Both LeClaire and Frank Brandes had supported those measures Monday.

As it now stands, the city will set aside 10 percent of all sewer connections allocated each year into a pool. Developers wishing to build low income housing will be able to draw from that pool without having to compete for sewage with all other builders.

Also, developers will be able to receive up to 20 points for voluntarily building subsidized apartments or for donating cash into a city controlled fund to assist low-income housing.

The plan met the approval of Pleasanton Housing Authority board chairperson Christine Pearson.

Council will again study the residential allocation program Thursday, Feb. 23, at 4 p.m. in chambers at 30 West Angela Street. That will make the eighth workshop council has held on the proposed plan to regulate the city's residential growth over the next 20 years.

What if the Valley seceded?

HAYWARD — Somewhere in Hayward, a man with more than average political connections and influence is calling friends to get their reaction to a startling proposal.

He wants to know whether they would support a movement to split Alameda County at the Oakland - San Leandro line.

He doesn't want his name used until he "goes public" with the notion, but it's okay with him if The Times samples a few public reactions in the Valley.

The Times called the mayors of Livermore and Pleasanton and also called Roger Silva, who served a term on the Livermore council and suggested, upon his council retirement in 1972, that the Valley secede from Alameda County and form its own county.

Silva recalled last week that he asked City Manager Bill Parness to do a report on the notion. And while other council members assented, Parness never did the report because no one really picked up the ball on it after Silva left politics.

Silva's notion at the time was much like the Hayward gentleman's theory today. Southern Alameda County and the Valley seem to pay lots of taxes to support the welfare and courts system used mainly by Oakland and Berkeley.

Specifically, Silva noted that the county maintains Santa Rita jail in the Valley, but few Valley residents are ever lodged there.

Silva also felt at the time that one Valley - wide county government would save money by providing consolidated police, fire and public works services for Dublin, Livermore, Pleasanton and Sunol.

Silva said that he's interested by the Hayward man's query about a separate county below the Oakland city line.

"But would Oakland let us secede with our tax dollars? If we pay $3 in taxes, we probably get back $2. Oakland pays $3 and gets $4," said Silva.

Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell experienced something similar when she lived in Long Island, N.Y.

"Every year Long Island would try to secede from New York and become a separate state," said Tirsell. "And every year the bill would get killed. New York didn't want to lose that tax revenue."

But at first glance, Tirsell is not so sure the Valley would save money if it became its own county. It looks as though it would because the Valley gets few services, except for road maintenance, from Alameda County, said Tirsell.

But as a separate county, the Valley would then have to build the missing services, like animal control, its own court system, a jail, and so on. And that could wind up costing more money than residents pay now, said Tirsell.

"The notion of a separate south county has more appeal," said Tirsell. "We do share more of the same problems, especially land use planning, and we have shown south county cities can cooperate on things like CETA funding."

A firm opponent of Harlan Geldermann's New Town proposal, Tirsell doesn't think a south county government would be harder to deal with on that question.

"People over the hill would want to take all the county growth themselves. Fremont wants to go from 110,000 to 180,000 by the year 2000. And they think that's slow growth," Tirsell commented.

Pleasanton's mayor, Robert Philcox, said he would have to see a deeply analytical study of the costs and benefits of the Hayward man's scheme.

"Those kinds of proposals are always interesting, but we would need to see where the money would come from and go," said the mayor.

Valley first aid interest zooms

A new type of class is sweeping the valley. It's more popular than tap dancing or basket weaving. It teaches long-known techniques. And the surge of interest in it is resulting in waiting lists pages long.

The ability to help save another human being's life is being sought after by valley residents in large numbers. Cardio pulminary resuscitation, crisis training and first aid training are the words capturing many imaginations.

"We have over 200 people already waiting for classes, plus all sorts of groups that want to be trained," says Dublin, San Ramon Services District (DSRSD) fireman Jon Ulricksen.

DSRSD, in conjunction with Valley Memorial Hospital' will begin a seven-year CPR training program in March. The program's goal: to train one out of every four residents in San Ramon and Dublin within that period.

CPR is hardly magic. The simple techniques can be learned in a few hours. They are basics such as mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and chest massage.

They are not, Ulricksen stresses, life-saving techniques in and of themselves. But they can often keep a person alive during those vital minutes before an ambulance arrives. And they apply to victims in a range of accidents, including heart attacks, strokes, poisoning, drowning and shock.

DSRSD's long-range program is available only to local residents. But Pleasanton and Livermore have their own plans.

Pleasanton's "Emergency Response Program" is cosponsored by the recreation department, the Red Cross, the fire department and the Junior Women's Club.

It's a short-term overall program including both first aide and CPR training.

It's too late to get into the CPR classes. They've been full since the program was first announced. And 120 persons will be trained in the technique when the program ends in March.

There is still room, however, in the free 'emergency response' classes.

Those courses teach family emergency plans, first aide, and give general information about smoke alarms and who to call when in trouble. The next class session is tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the Cultural Arts building, 4477 Black Avenue.

"This is a kind of experiment to see what the community need is," says program coordinator Dolores Bengston. "We suspect we'll set up CPR and first aide classes on a continuing basis."

But the classes probably won't be free, says Bengston, noting that the training mannequins are expensive and need to be replaced often.

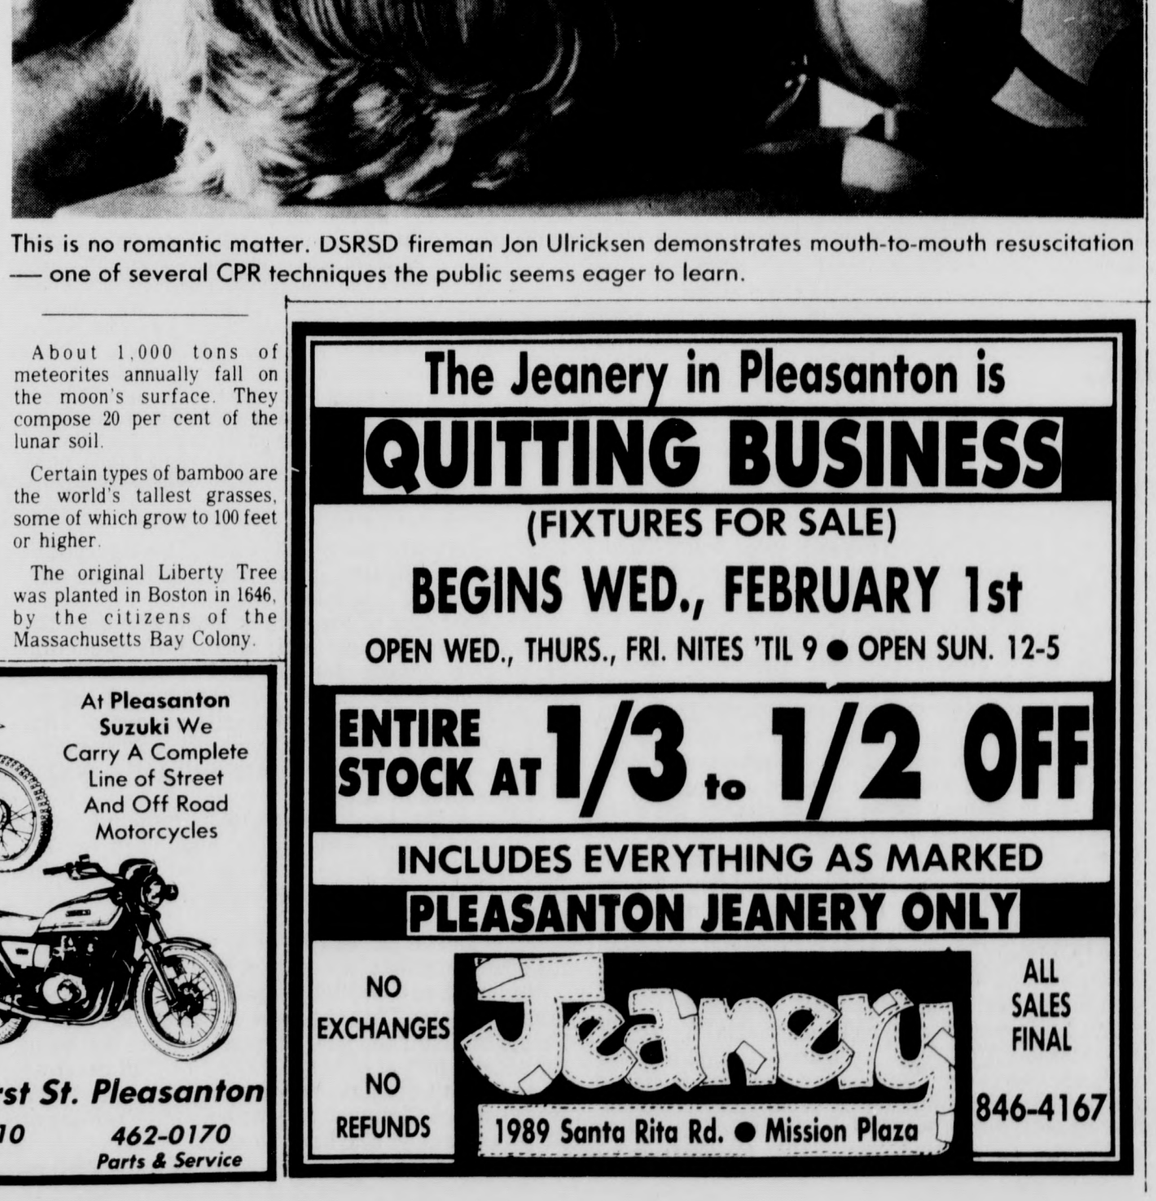
Livermore lacks a formal program right now, but the American Red Cross does teach first aide and CPR at various times throughout the year.

Jerry Hultberg, recreation supervisor for the Livermore Area Recreation and Parks Department, is working with the fire department there to come up with a program similar to Pleasanton's.

Although the interest is high, Hultberg doesn't know if a long-term program "would be feasible." Again, the cost is cited as the reason.

Money may be hard to get, but it appears that students are waiting in throngs.

— by Jayne Garrison



This is no romantic matter. DSRSD fireman Jon Ulricksen demonstrates mouth-to-mouth resuscitation — one of several CPR techniques the public seems eager to learn.

The water's fine

Remember when people here used to complain about the water? There were snide remarks about its hardness, impurities and nasty taste.

Customers made jokes about the water. Politicians turned it into a campaign issue. The Valley's water supplier, Zone 7 of the Alameda County Flood Control District, had to endure it.

But time and events have changed all of that and today Zone 7 is one of our heroic bureaucratic outposts. The mood shifted during two-and-a-half years of drought when foresight by our water managers precluded any kind of mandatory rationing.

Certainly the transformation from villains to shining knights was completed last week with word that Zone 7 is slashing property tax rates in next year's budget.

It's a sizeable cut — six cents on every $100 of assessed valuation. The rate of 28 cents per $100 will cost the district an estimated $116,000 in revenue, officials say.

One board member explained that Zone 7 just didn't need all that money, and it was about time somebody did something for the beleaguered taxpayer.

Of course there's the possibility of increased property assessments which would ultimately restore those lost funds to Zone 7. But the generous sentiments are still there to be appreciated — especially in light of events throughout the state.

Most water districts are moaning about revenue losses brought on by forced rationing. Rates in many of those districts have risen drastically. In the East Bay Municipal Utilities District another hike is on the way.

How refreshing to here Zone 7 directors say they don't need more money. How comforting to here that they want to give us a tax break.

The water we get from Zone 7 may cloud up in the glass. It may still be hard, too. Put in perspective, however, the water's fine.

They handled it well

In all of the unhappiness surrounding the departure of Livermore police chief Ronald Lindgren from duty last month there is at least one comforting note, the posture of two secondary employers.

Lindgren was a part-time law enforcement instructor in the Livermore school district and for the Valley Campus of Chabot College.

Midst the controversey of his resignation as chief, and subsequent hints of alleged misconduct, Lindgren resigned his teaching posts last week. He simply thought it best to get out.

There appeared to be no pressure from either employer. In fact, administrators in the Livermore district, and at Chabot, praised Lindgren. They cited his teaching rapport with students and his professional manor.

It speaks well for them.

Unfortunately the atmosphere has been charged with rumor and secrecy since Lindgren stepped down and City Manager Bill Parness said the possibility of "illegal activities" was being investigated. How easy it would have been for the educators to succumb to the uproar, and force Lindgren out.

To do so would have only added to the sensationalism and mistrust. There is enough of that going around already.

It's heartening to discover that at least in the halls of academe, a man can still be innocent until charged and convicted.

County schools

He's not a candidate

Editor, The Times:

Approximately two weeks ago, Al Fishers column mentioned my name as a possible candidate for Mrs. Birdsall's seat on the Alameda County Board of Education when she retires this June. To say the least, I was very flattered as I have been off the Board for one and a half years, and old retired Board Members fade fast away into the dusty archives of history. Without the use of my shillelagh, I was very pleased with your recommendation to seek election to the seat, but it produced some sleepless nights in deep meditation to reach a decision.

As I am presently a member of the Alameda County Schools Personnel Commission, formed when the County School Department went fiscally independant in 1976, I feel that I could not fulfill my obligation to the Classified Personnel by running for the seat. The other two Commissioners and myself were able to make the transition to the Merit System with little of the trauma that normally accompanies such a change within the personnel structure of an organization, through the use of good common sense and patience. We have completed the first steps in the formative years and I feel that leaving the Commission at this time would deny them of my past Board experience and any help that I could place at their disposal. I thank you for your confidence in my past efforts while on the Board of Education and my sincere best wishes for the successful candidate.

The week in retrospect

School $$ & Jarvis

"I see a significant fiscal problem continuing to exist in financing of public education."

While this comment by Amador and Pleasanton schools' superintendent Bruce Newlin will surprise few close to public education in this state, it is significant to learn what the outgoing schools chief believes could be an answer and what is most certainly a potential hindrance.

With respect to the former, Newlin notes that McDermid, an attorney for the Serrano-Priest measure, has gone back into court to file what amounts to "Serrano III," which contends that Assembly Bill 65 does not fully comply.

"Complying" in this case means a greater "leveling-out" of education funding for public schools. In short, to bring the Pittsburgs and Baldwin Parks of the world up to the funding levels of the Beverly Hills and Piedmonts.

Newlin implies that until the logjam in legislative thinking on public education funding is broken, districts throughout the state will be forced to continue with band aid approaches.

The former Lancaster and Calexico administrator evidences little doubt where the financial roadblocks might be.

Newlin says the Jarvis-Gann tax initiative is "simplistic."

At a Pleasanton school board meeting earlier this week, Newlin said the local districts could lose $2 million if the Jarvis amendment is passed this June and goes into affect July 1.

To review, the amendment says the maximum amount of any ad valorem tax on real property shall not exceed 1 per cent of the full cash value of such property. The 1 per cent to be collected by the counties and apportioned according to law to the districts within the counties.

Thus, the Jarvis-Gann measure could substantially cripple public agencies — which is exactly what the 65-year old, toughtalking former realtor may want to do.

Darrell Carter, business manager of the Murray School District, has some fearful words for his district's board concerning the tax initiative.

A background report scheduled for Monday night's meeting at Wells Intermediate School indicates the district could lose half (H-A-L-F) of their tax revenues if Jarvis-Gann is approved by the electorate.

Similar revelations will be forthcoming from other districts and municipalities in the weeks to come.

But Newlin didn't limit his comments to the school financing picture during an interview with The Times Friday.

He also expressed opinions on the subject of declining enrollment, necessary qualifications of a good superintendent and what he believes has been the most significant change or emphasis in public education since be began teaching more than 15 years ago.

His comments will surprise more than a few and, perhaps, cause some soul-searching. We'll report on the comments in the next couple of days.

The real spenders

Editor, The Times:

Our State Assemblyman, Floyd Mori, was quoted in the Times on Tuesday, January 31, as saying, "The Jarvis-Gann tax reform initiative is the most fiscally-irresponsible measure to come before the electorate in many a year." The tactic here is familiar and recognizable. If a label really belongs on you or on your friends, apply it first to your oppenents. Seize the initiative. Oneupsmanship.

The real fiscal irresponsibles are the various legislatures of our land. Their irresponsibility lies in voting for ever greater programs without consulting the electorate, without considering, or perhaps even knowing, how much will be the ultimate cost, and often deliberately planning to pay for them by increasing the debt (deficit spending) or by printing more paper money (inflation).

The Jarvis-Gann initiative would limit the annual property tax to one percent of the cash value of the property. Proponents of this measure are saying not only, "You've reached our limit — we can't pay anymore," but also, "Show some fiscal responsibility — cut back government spending to fit the income."

The last thing a bureaucrat or legislator wants to do is cut operations. If one source of funds dries up he will desperately seek others. For those interested in cutting back the intrusive power and irresponsible spending of governments, the Jarvis-Gann initiative is only the beginning. With this measure passed, the state will then turn to big brother fedgov for funds — "revenue sharing" and similar schemes. Unless the electorate places comparable limitations on the federal government we will find that county and state programs have simply become federal programs still funded from the same taxpayers' pockets.

An effort aimed at reducing the power and profligacy of the federal government is the national TRIM Committee movement (Tax Reform Immediately). This movement has been underway for several years and the struggle will likely take several more before we again have government recognizing its responsibility to the taxpayers.

Those who would restore governments to their proper role as agents rather than rulers of the people should, in addition to supporting the Jarvis-Gann initiative, consider joining the TRIM Committee for this area. Call (415) 352-0255 for information. The committee's address is 1206 Sandelin Avenue, San Leandro 94577. The more who get involved, the sooner the battle will be won.

Jarvis support

Attention: Fred Cooper
Alameda County Supervisor

Thank you for the printed information which you used to develop your opposition to the Jarvis property tax reduction initiative which will reduce our property taxes approximately 50 percent and limit future property tax increases to 2 percent per year and require a two-thirds (⅔) vote of the legislators to raise any new state taxes.

Your opposition to the well founded Jarvis initiative is based on a flimsy, typical bureaucratic, conviction that the revenue loss pursuant to the Jarvis property tax reduction initiative must be made up and collected from another source so that you can maintain and continue your bureaucracy explosion which is implementing a socialist-Soviet design dictatorship government, disguised as public protection, costing each U.S. tax paying citizen more than $2,000 per year in Federal income tax, not to mention the thousands of tax dollars each tax paying citizen pays each year in disguised forms of tax to our state and local governments which is divided between hundreds of bureaucracy's all formed and operating under the guise of public protection services which increase the price of the homes we buy, rents, our utilities and all consumer products we buy.

Well Mr. Cooper, since you were born, our nation provided our citizens the greatest comforts and standards of living on earth and we did it without these bureaucracies and this $430 billion dollar tax load. Do away with these wasteful bureaucracies and you won't need to make up for lost revenue you won't be getting when we vote for the Jarvis tax initiative.

Capitol report

Dellums raps oil supporters

By DAVID HOFFMAN
Time's Washington Bureaumc

Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Berkeley, says the NAACP made "a horrendus mistake" by declaring its support for the oil and natural gas industry in their fight against President Carter's energy program.

In an interview, Dellums said he agreed with the NAACP's goal of creating more jobs, "but you don't jump in bed with the oil industry to get them."

Dellums, a member of the Congressional Black Caucus, was responding to what has emerged as a major turnaround by the civil rights organization, set forth two weeks ago in a policy statement by the NAACP's National Energy Conference.

The report abandoned all support for Carter's energy tax legislation, and called for full deregulation of oil and natural gas prices and increased reliance on nuclear power.

After years of steadfastly supporting government solutions to national economic and social problems, the NAACP said that energy policy should be left to the free-market as a means of spurring economic growth and thus creating new jobs for blacks.

The policy statement has stirred controversy among black leaders and some — including Dellums — have accused the NAACP of "selling out" to big business.

The authors of the NAACP report say that unbridled growth in the oil and natural gas industry would lead directly to econimic economic expansion — and thus help reduce the 14 percent unemployment rate among black workers.

"We all want more jobs," said Dellums, "But would you use the same logic to justify building the B-1 bomber, the MX mobile missile, or more nuclear power plants that could pose a danger to thousands of people?"

"They (the NAACP) are simply incorrect," Dellums said.

Others have disagreed, however, including NAACP Chairman Margaret B. Wilson, who said that Carter's energy program was put together "by a virtually lily-white coterie of White House advisors who subscribe to a limits to growth philosophy ... which tends to freeze people to whatever rung of the ladder they happen to be on."

"That's OK if you're a highly-educated, 28-year-old making $50,000 a year as a presidential advisor," she said, "but it's utter disaster if you're unskilled, out of work and living in a ghetto."

Dellums said he thinks that publication of the report will hurt the efforts of some black congressional leaders to back President Carter's energy program while pursuing their own solutions to the unemployment situation."

It's going to make our job more difficult," Dellums said. "The people behind the energy companies are going to be throwing this in our face."

"We're not unified on this problem," Dellums acknowledged, adding that the Congressional Black Caucus may soon spell out its own views on the NAACP report.

Overtime bill causes ruckus

By FRED W. KLINE
Capitol News Service

SACRAMENTO — As we predicted a few weeks ago, a bill which would prohibit employers of more than 50 people from requiring personnel to work overtime is shaping up as one of the most controversial of the 1978 election year session.

Author of the bill, AB 1295, is Assemblyman Tom Bates, D-Oakland.

The criticism to it is not just partisan in nature. One of Bates' Democratic colleagues, Assemblyman Dan Boatwright of Concord, last year called it "the most anti-business measure" ever to come before the legislature.

Naturally, Bates objected to that assessment, but now the gaunlet has been picked up by business interests throughout California.

What is shaping up is a classic confrontation between business and labor.

On one side is the California Manufacturers Association, CMA, and on the other is organized labor, which wants California to be the first state to enact such legislation.

At the moment, however, it appears the bill cannot get through a key policy committee, Senate Industrial Relations, charied by Bill Greene, D-Los Angeles.

In any event, if such a measure is enacted, the CMA is predicting a disaster for California business.

A spokesman for the Ford Motor Company has already said it will shift its overtime work plants to other states should the Bates measure become law.

This alone, could mean an economic loss to California of $550 million a year in interstate trade, not to mention the loss of buying power of Ford's 6,000 employees.

Bates' measure offers no legislative relief in these crucial areas.

Age puts odds against Reagan

Although ex-governor Ronald Reagan continues his vigorous efforts in pursuit of his obvious goal at a pace which would kill many a younger man, the acturial odds are stacked against his achieving the GOP nomination for President.

For Reagan who would be 70 taking office if he were elected in 1980, would be the oldest ever. In fact, taking the average, most of the 38 Presidents of the United States had served and were dead before they reached age 70.

More important is the apparent reluctance of the voting public to bet on a candidate's longevity. The average age of the 38 Presidents at time of taking office is 54½ with the youngest ever being Theodore Roosevelt at age 42 and John F. Kennedy at age 43.

The oldest to take office was William H. Harrison at age 68 and he died that very year within a month of being sworn in.

The oldest in this century was Dwight D. Eisenhower at age 62. No other person over 60 has been elected President since James Buchanan in 1856. Only four others were ever elected over age 60.

Now Ronnie may be willing to chance the odds insofar as winning or losing an election but one wonders whether he ever studied the life expectancy tables on those who served as President? Knowing how he lives in mortal fear of death as evidenced by the bodyguards which surrounded him from the time he first became a candidate for governor and throughout his two terms in office and thereafter, he hasn't.

But he should. For, based on actuarial figures of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the odds are two to one that Reagan would be dwarfing his life span considerably by becoming President. The charts show that 22 Presidents had their life cut by an average of 10½ years. Rutherford B. Hayes shortened his by 20 years. The figures relate to natural deaths and do not include those who were victims of assassination.

The other side of the coin is those who beat the odds and lived beyond their normal life expectancy despite having served as President. There were, so far, 13 for an average of 7 years in excess of what could have been actuarily expected. That includes John Adams who lived to age 90 and Herbert Hoover who did likewise as well as Harry Truman who died at age 88.

Still, having been fortunate in enjoying good health and being remarkably preserved for his age, Ronnie may be so bitten by the bug of ambition that he will be willing to gamble on the short odds.

Nevertheless he will have to convince those in his own party that he can beat those odds.

Maybe he can do that by pointing across the Atlantic. Winston Churchill was 65 before he became Prime Minister the first time and was called back for second period of service after he had reached 75 and didn't die until he was 90. Then, too, there was Georges Clemenceau who became Premier of France at age 76 and lived to be 88.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm expecting my first baby in about three months and I find that I have ambivilant feelings about motherhood. I've been filled with conflict the past few weeks and it worries me. My husband I decided we wanted a child and my pregnancy was no accident. I'm afraid I'm going to be a rotten mother. I had a bad mother myself. She was unahppy about her role and she really took it out on all her kids and our father. I don't want to repeat that kind of life, but I feel trapped. I haven't discussed this with my husband because I'm afraid he wouldn't understand since I don't understand it myself. C.L.

DEAR C.L.: Becoming a mother and anticipating the birth of a child, especially if it's the first, is a stressful event in any woman's life. Only sudden death is as stressful as the birth of a first child and the depression, grief, and mourning some women undergo after giving birth is quite understandable.

The emphasis on the joys and glories of motherwhood often work great hardships on some women because they make they feel out of step, as if something's wrong or abnormal about them. Many young mothers are pressured by the growing demands of parents husbands and grandparents. They are caught between these pressures and their growing awareness of a changing role for women in a new world. Some young mothers are torn by conflict over whether they want a career or to be a parent.

You can help yourself by trying to live in the moment. You don't have to make all your life decisions now. Your anxieties aren't unusual. Talk them out.

3DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband says I imagine it but I feel that men, even those who consider themself supporters of equality of the sexes, do not treat women with the same respect that they give to men. I have a high salaried, responsible position and I work with eight men who are supposed to be my equals, in training, intellect and position. Whenever I make comments or suggestions even though I'm later proven correct, my male colleagues tend to belittle or ignore them. They seem to expect me to keep quiet and "stay in my place" though they know my slary and training are the same as theirs. My husband says I'm overly sensitive and that I should just "bull" my way through if any man gets in the way. A.R.

DEAR A.R.: I suspect that you're frequently the victim of prejudice even though the men you work with may be totally aware of their attitudes.

Psychiatrist Carol Wolman of the University of Pennsyulvania and Hal Frank, a group behavior specialist, conducted some studies to find out how men and women interact. They discovered that the lone woman had an especially difficult time and even though she had high academic or professional credentials, she was consistently denied a role of equlity in the group.

The men in the study seemed to feel more threatened by competition from the woman than the other men in the group. The presence of the lone woman prompted the men to change and assume more macho roles. The reseachesr felt that when a single woman entered an all-male group, the men resented it and yet felt they couldn't openly express their hostility.

I don't think you should give in to your male co-workers nor ignore what you believe is unfair treatment. Try to arrange to talk with them, either all together, or individually and let them know how you feel. Encourage them to try to explore their motives.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was hospitalized with a coronary last November. The actual diagnosis was acute myocardial infarction essential hypertention, which my doctor never fully explained. I would appreciate it if you would explain in layman's terms.

I have lost about 30 pounds but the doctor wants me to lose another 10. He recommends walking and watching calories. I'm currently on Hydrochlorthiazide for water and five Aldomet daily. My latest blood pressure reading was 170 over 210.

I used to smoke two packs of cigarettes a day and quit cold-turkey in the hospital but now find the urge very strong. I haven't smoked since and would like to know exactly how harmful a low-tar filter cigarette would be. I have sneaked a few, but that is all.

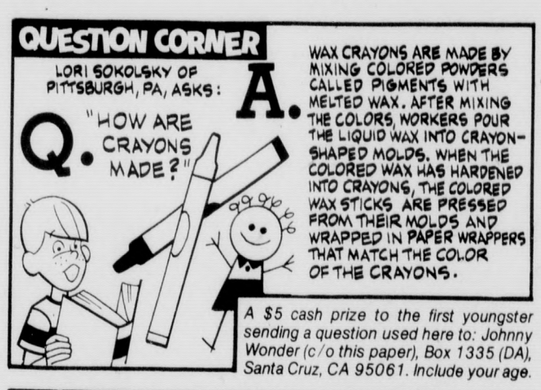
DEAR READER — Your diagnosis means you have fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries to your heart msucle and that the obstruction they caused was enough to cause part of your heart muscle (myocardium) to die (infarct). The dead heart muscle is replaced with scar tissue. You have a serious and, if not controlled adequately, fatal disease.

Three of the important factors that need to be controlled to prevent progression of your disease are your blood pressure, and your level of blood cholesterol, as well as the cigarette smoking.

It is very important to control your blood pressure. The medicines and reduction in body weight should help. You should lose every ounce of fat under your skin until there is no evidence of a roll or fat pad around your trunk anywhere. You will not get the maximum benefit out of weight control unless you go this far. Many doctors let patients stop losing weight too soon and never see the remarkable benefits that can be achieved with adequate treatment.

Smoking cigarettes may increase your chances of having a heart attack or dropping dead three times what it would be for a non-smoker. And those low tar cigarettes help some, but not enough. In addition to the nicotine in cigarettes, smoke also contains carbon monoxide. This may be higher in some of the filtered cigarettes that cut down tar and nicotine. You are making a terrible mistake in "sneaking a few." That is enough to get you back on the habit. The only way to stay off cigarettes is to stay off completely and forever. Don't be trapped into thinking that you can smoke just one.

You should also sharply limit your salt intake. People with high blood pressure often do much better by doing this. Taking a diuretic will help wash out the sodium, but it also washes out potassium, as do most diuretics. You need to change your diet to include more fruits and vegetables, while avoiding using salt. Fruits and vegetables will provide more potassium in your diet.



QUESTION CORNER
LORI SOKOLSKY OF PITTSBURGH, PA, ASKS:
Q. "HOW ARE CRAYONS MADE?"
A. WAX CRAYONS ARE MADE BY MIXING COLORED POWDERS CALLED PIGMENTS WITH MELTED WAX. AFTER MIXING THE COLORS, WORKERS POUR THE LIQUID WAX INTO CRAYON-SHAPED MOLDS. WHEN THE COLORED WAX HAS HARDENED INTO CRAYONS, THE COLORED WAX STICKS ARE PRESSED FROM THEIR MOLDS AND WRAPPED IN PAPER WRAPPERS THAT MATCH THE COLOR OF THE CRAYONS.

Feb. 5, 1978

Beneficial developments could ensue this coming year from a relationship with one who thinks on your wave length. Each will be instrumental in broadening the other's horizons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.19) Leaving to others things that you should take care of yourself is asking for trouble today. Be a doer instead of trying to pass the buck.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Gatherings where there are a couple of hotshots who always upstage you are better avoided today. A small, democratic group will be more fun.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Playing favorites today is a sure way to alienate friends. Be equally as nice to those who aren't in the position to do things for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's likely that you'll achieve what you set out to do today, but you may use some unbecoming tactics to do so. Is it worth the price?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Discontent is a strong possibility in joint ventures today. The reason could be each expects more than he or she is willing to give.

CANCER (JunB 21-July 22) In matters relating to the general welfare of your family, you and your mate will be in accord today. The friction will arise over who is to administrate what.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unfortunately, you may turn a deaf ear to sound advice today in order to be your own person. Frustrations that could have been skirted will result.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22) In familjar areas where you adhere to your usual practices, success is likely. Out of your element, or departing from routine, the odds are against you.

LIBRA (Sept.23-Oct.23) You make a better guest than a host or hostess today. You're very appreciative of being catered to, but you don't want that responsibility yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov.22) Impatience could destroy your possibilities today. It might prompt you to push and shove where you'd be better off placating instead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec.21) Strong discipline is required today in managing your resources. You'll recognize the more prudent course, but extravagance could overpower practicality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects look very encouraging today, but to satisfy them you may experience several abrasive encounters.

Opening lead: ♥ K

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Curtis Cook of Birmingham was quite pleased with the opening heart lead. It looked as if it would solve all his problems. Then East went and trumped it. Now Curtis could only see 11 tricks, but it did look as if a squeeze could be developed.

As Curtis said, "The cards seem to be crying 'Double squeeze.' "

It wasn't a certainty. If West held four clubs he could guard both clubs and hearts. Otherwise only West could guard hearts, only East could guard clubs and no one could guard diamonds.

East led a spade at trick two. Curtis took his ace and king, cashed the queen of clubs, entered dummy with the jack of spades, discarded his last two little hearts on the ace and king of clubs and came to his hand with the ace of hearts.

Operation squeeze followed. He cashed one trump to discard a diamond from dummy and his last trump to force West to unguard his queen of diamonds in order to hang on to the high heart.

Dummy's jack of hearts had done its work and could be discarded. Now the nine of clubs squeezed East. He had to unguard his jack of diamonds to make all the diamonds good.

Unique SRV school program

Seasoned sixth graders check neophytes

DANVILLE — Some of Baldwin Elementary School's sixth graders are breaking down institutional barriers — with a little help from their friends.

Their friends, formally known as "partners," are first and second grade students at the same Brookside Drive school.

And for about 30 minutes three or four times each week, they team up for what teachers Jane Gulseth and Jan Macdougall refer to as a "cross age" learning experiment.

The sixth graders cast off their top-of-the-heap elitist status and get back to basics with their counterparts from the bottom of the educational ladder.

Equipped with a folder listing various skills (ex.: can write first and last name; knows birthday; counts to 100; tells time; counts by five's; can jump rope; knows the vowels), each sixth grade student gets together with his or her partner for some individualized tutoring.

They sit side by side at a table, sprawl across the carpeted floor, work at the chalk board or curl up in the corner with a book.

From the looks on most of the students' faces, the experiment is intense, challenging — and fun.

One girl chalks up addition problems for her young friend partner, who looks quizzically at the 15 plus 7 and shakes her head.

"I can't add that," she says.

"Oh, yes you can," encourages her helper.

And sometimes the younger students can teach their elders a few things.

One sixth grade boy told his partner it was time to clean up their paperwork and appeared caught slightly off-guard with the reply: "Hey, if we go outside and jump up rope with those guys, we won't have to clean up. Right?"

Gulseth and Macdougall said the cross-age program started after some initial sharing of programs by their classes.

"We started cooking and doing a few things together and it just evolved," said Macdougall.

Both teachers and aide Pat Russo said they have been surprised at the cooperation between the two groups.

"It's amazing how separate they are," said Russo, referring to the traditional classroom arrangements. "They really have nothing in common."

But during the past year of the experiment, the two have gradually abandoned that notion of separateness and to the amazement of the teachers, even play with one another freely during recesses.

"It's almost like it's given them (the sixth graders) a license to act younger," said Russo.

But they also act more mature and take responsibility for the learning progress of their partners, said Macdougall.

"They're a lot more creative than we could be in some situations ... It really challenges my kids to think of new ways to teach things," she said.

Gulseth recounted a story of one boy who tried without much success to interest his partner in various learning projects.

Finally, the older boy suggested the two team up and draw. To his surprise, his partner agreed.

Gulseth said the boy glanced at the teachers, raised his hands over his head in a sign of victory and practically danced to the an easel with his charge.

Another boy tried to convince his partner to try to learn to jump rope, said Gulseth. The youngster pleaded with his older sister, who was in the same group, "Tell him I can't."

When the breakthrough took place, the entire class gathered around the classroom windows and watched the pair jumping rope outside.

The older assistance assistant looked on with a "parent-like grin on his face," said Gulseth.

On the other hand, the youngsters try to help their elders when they can too.

Recently, the sixth graders spent an hour on a difficult test. The teachers asked the first and second grade students to try to keep the noise down.

Baldwin, which operates in "pod" arrangements that open up to an arena-type center, is not known for its solitude. The youngstes were quiet as mice.

"These are their friends and they know they're studying for a test," said Gulseth. "It's not like somebody coming down on them and saying, 'Hey, be quiet.'"

Macdougall said the experiment has made the sixth graders "more human." adding that, "They're not playing a macho thing They're just friends — which is incredible."

"Knowledgeable sixth grader Jack Rehnberg, 12, tests the basic fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic with his special session partner, Joseph Chien, 6, a first grader at Baldwin Elementary School. The program is stirring primary graders' interest. (Times photo)

Convicted murderer released by Brown

SOLEDAD (AP) — Luigi Aranda, freed after 2½ years in jail for a murder authorities say he didn't commit, is bitter about the lengthy delay in gaining his freedom.

"There was no need for it," Aranda said Friday after walking out of the state prison here, a few hours after Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. commuted his 21 years to life sentence to time served.

"I still can't understand what his (Brown's) hangup is," Aranda added. "I think the political part has a lot to do with it. I don't think he's really concerned about whether Luigi Aranda is innocent or guilty but what it might do about his political career."

Brown signed the commutation order 311 days after San Francisco District Attorney Joseph Frietas Jr. asked him to grant Aranda a full pardon.

The request followed a renewed investigation by police inspectors Frank Falzon and Jack Cleary, who had built the case that convicted Aranda in the first place.

"I still believe if they'd done their job properly in the first place, this never would have happened," Aranda said.

Brown declined to issue a full pardon, saying evidence submitted to him "does not conclusively establish his innocence."

J. Anthony Kline, the governor's legal affairs secretary, said a pardon will be granted if the continuing investigation into the case "makes that an appropriate thing to do."

Assistant District Attorney Thomas Crary said the commutation order is a significant milestone, but is not a stopping point. He said he would not be satisfied until Aranda is granted a full pardon.

"I'm not satisfied with a half-solved puzzle and I think the citizens of San Francisco deserve to have this matter brought to a conclusion and the real killer brought to justice," Crary said.

Aranda was convicted of second degree murder for the November 1974 shooting death of Hell's Angel Jesse Galvin. In mid-1975, a woman called police and said her husband had confessed to the killing. Police said she had information that could only have come from the killers and the investigation was reopened.

Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavily armed guerrillas attacked the national guard garrison and burned the post office in the lakeside city of Granada, killing at least one person, witnesses said.

Worse to come?

Coal strike adds to winter woes

A nationwide coal strike during a stormy January has brought inconvenience to hundreds of thousands of people in parts of the nation — with deeper hardship threatened.

Street lights are off in Columbus, Ohio; Indiana is in a state of emergency; some 6,500 railwaymen are laid off. Power cutbacks are in effect or threatened in states from Virginia into the Midwest.

And if the strike lasts much longer, some officials and utilities east of the Mississippi River say, it could affect large numbers of jobs.

Unless coal supplies start moving within two weeks, "it means that business will have to curtail up to 50 percent usage and that would mean as many as 100,000 layoffs in southwestern Ohio," said Ed Woelking, a spokesman for the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

Some officials are resisting utilities' calls for help, with Maryland's acting Gov. Blair Lee III saying he wants no part in "scare headlines."

But Norman Wagner, vice president of Southern Indiana Gas & Electric Co., called the situation "critical" in his state late last week and said a 50-day figure for coal stockpiles there is misleading.

"Even if there was an agreement this afternoon, there would be a period of about 30 days at least before coal piles would begin to increase again," he said.

Most power companies stockpiled coal before Dec. 4, when the United Mine Workers launched their strike against coal operators in a contract dispute over wages, benefits and right-to-strike provisions.

Then came a cluster of January blizzards, which hit the Midwest and Northeast hard, forcing power usage up at a time when coal deliveries had slacked off. A massive ice jam began to choke the Ohio River, further complicating coal delivery problems in the Midwest.

By this weekend, the coal strike had become the longest nationwide walkout in UMW history, and many stockpiles were dwindling.

Severe problems are appearing so far only in the area east of the Mississippi, which relies most on coal from Appalachia, where the UMW is strong. Varying types of power cutback are being sought by utilities in Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia.

On the other hand, utilities in such widely scattered areas as Minnesota, South Carolina, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Nebraska, and Missouri report no threat of cutbacks. They use energy sources other than coal, or their coal stockpiles are adequate for now.

Indiana officials, however, told citizens last week to cut power use by 25 percent or face rotating blackouts.

In neighboring Ohio, where the late January blizzard was the worst on record, the Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co. reported 48 days of coal left and called for a 25 percent cutback in power usage.

An Association of American Railroads official who did not want to be identified said it is "the worst it's ever been for the railroads during a coal strike," with an estimated 6,500 rail workers furloughed.

Sadat visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is extending a lowkeyed reception to Anwar Sadat as the Egyptian leader begins a new drive here for U.S. support in his negotiations with Israel.

Administration officials, in advance of the 5½-day visit, said no dramatic breakthroughs in the peace talks are anticipated.

Land slipping away and threatening a $200,000 home is posing concern for the owner, Leticia Easton, who has filed suit against the builder, seller and previous residents. The ranch-style residence in the Mt. Diablo foothills is threatened following recent heavy rains which caused severe erosion of the expensive hillside site. Easton points out the areas of her concern in the photographs above.

Rains brought woes

Her home slipping in Diablo foothills

By KATHLEEN MACLAY
Times Staff Writer

DIABLO — Leticia Easton and her two children are among the few Californians who hated to see the drought end.

Their fears of the winter rains were well-founded.

As predicted in an engineering report she ordered last summer, the steady downpours resulted in more damage to her property at 2509 Caballo Ranchero.

Before the rains, one could observe a huge crack running across the backyard.

Today half the yard is lying about eight feet beneath the home's foundation and the Eastons are afraid of what might slide away next.

"It's worse than it ever was," said Easton, a 38-year-old financial consultant.

She said the slide also has pushed soil against the neighbors' fence, nearly causing it to collapse.

Asked if she had checked thoroughly inside her home for any signs of cracks or damage, Easton replied quickly, "No, I don't want to look."

In December 1976, Easton filed suit against the builder, seller and previous residents of her $200,000 home in the Mt. Diablo foothills.

Named in the action which has yet to reach the courts are: H.M. Bull, San Ramon Builders, George Sauer, Faith and William Strassburger.

Her attorney, Jan Smith of Oakland, said the case has been delayed because of normal court backlog, but estimated it shold be heard sometime this year.

"I don't think the house will last that long," sighed Easton.

In September 1977, it was estimated that repairs would cost about $60,000. There were no estimates available for the cost of repairs after the most recent damage.

UC lecturer explains women's longevity

Dr. Ingrid Waldron lectured recently at U.C. Berkeley on the subject of why women live longer than men.

She is a researcher at the Joseph Leidy Laboratory of Biology at the University of Pennsylvania.

Her findings, as stated in the Alameda County Department on Aging February newsletter, reveal the following points.

Life expectancy in the U.S. at present is age 76 for women and 68 for men. Cultural factors are involved in the leading causes for deaths which affect sex differences. The causes of death are:

Malignant neoplasm of the respiratory system, bronchopulmonic disease, motor vehicle accidents, suicide, other accidents, cirrohsis of the liver and arteriosclerotic heart disease.

Dealing with number one and two, smoking differences affect death rates. Women don't smoke as frequently, the report stated. Teenagers are equally represented as smokers. Men are exposed much more to industrial carcinogens, especially asbestos which induces lung cancer.

Men have twice the number of fatal accidents per mile as women. They turn without signalling, run lights and drive while drunk, according to newsletter statements.

The suicide rate of men is three times higher. Women attempt suicide more often but are not successful. This is not attributed to lack of competence but lack of real desire. Men use guns and women use drugs so more women increase their chances of being saved. The suicide rate of very old men is high.

Accidents often occur at work. More men work in physically dangerous occupations. Gun accidents are male oriented. Far more men drown in boating accidents, etc. They are much more involved in dangerous activities.

Alcohol, smoking and obesity are factors in these diseases. Men drink more, smoke more inhaling deeply. They eat heavily of animal fats.

The above statements are not the whole story, the newsletter adds. Other countries having all these same factors don't have the same results we do.

The other factor is the coronary prone behavior pattern ... or Type A as it is becoming known.

This is a rushed, hard driving, competitive, aggressive person. These were typical male characteristics in the past.

These persons interrupt others in speaking, they speak with emphasis, seldom relax and are bent on success.

Women with these same characteristics are more prone to coronary heart disease.

The Type A men tended to have stricter parents, be surburban residents and their mothers made escalating demands.

This self-destructive behavior goes across social lines and shows up in all classes. Alcohol is a big factor.

The culture has suppressed drinking in women especially as being inconsistent with child care.

Activities which should induce fitness do not always fare well with aggressive men. They play with the same hard determination that they use in their work.

Housewives are not prone to coronary disease, the report indicated.

Women who see themselves emerging in the male world would do well to understand the dangers and monitor themselves accordingly.

"Type A Behavior and Your Heart" by Friedman and Rosenman in paperback is recommended in the newsletter as a book that deals well with the problem.

The newsletter editor stated, "I've always thought that we should introduce legislation that would force men to live as long as women. It's unmanly to cut out early, often when the job is not completed."

Actress Britt Ekland plans return to Sweden in TV role

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Britt Ekland, who no longer lives with rock star Rod Stewart, was in NBC's "Ring of Passion" last week and is in NBC's "The Great Wallendas" next Sunday. And after that?

She'll start filming a six-part mini-series on Feb. 20. But the beautiful blonde actress says it won't be for NBC, ABC or CBS. It's for non-commercial television in her native Sweden.

The show is "The Shipowner," by British writer Norman Crisp. Miss Ekland, 35, says she'll play the friend of a British journalist who marries the playboy son of a Swedish shipbuilding family.

"I've never worked in Sweden before, never said a line of dialogue in Swedish, and it's scary," said the lady, calm, assured and confident when interviewed over a few toddies at a famed hotel here.

There arose the inevitable question of her recent settlement with Stewart, whom she sued last August for $15 million when they split up after living together 2½ years here sans benefit of marriage.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles, was called off last month with an out-of-court agreement. Miss E. politely but firmly declined to say what was worked out by the opposing forces.

"It was a private settlement between me and Rod which will never be known to the press," she said. "Neither he nor I will discuss it. We have made an agreement between ourselves to that effect."

That being settled, she was asked why she's returning to Sweden to make a TV show — at relatively low pay — instead of continuing to labor in Hollywood's lucrative film and television hatcheries.

"Well, it was a hard decision," she said. "But I'm so fed up with Sweden not recognizing me for what I am — an actress, not a soap opera, not an object.

"I'm a working actress and have been that for close to 15 years," said the veteran of nearly 30 movies, including "The Night They Raided Minsky's" and "The Man with the Golden Gun."

Miss Ekland, ex-wife of Britain's Peter Sellers and mother of two young children, isn't abandoning movie-making here. But she concedes that her acceptance of that Swedish TV offer has caused some distress to certain parties here.

"My agent is tearing his hair out, my business manager is quitting, but what can I do?" asked the actress, whose career began when she moved from Sweden to England at 20 to study acting and work.

"The ties to my own country are stronger than the desire just to make lots of money and be very, very famous."

Exercise beats tranquilizers

OAKLAND — Exercise can replace tranquilizers and should, according to a statement made by Dr. Herbert de Vries in the Alameda County Department on Aging February newsletter.

Dr. de Vries is affiliated with the Ethel Percy Andrus Gerontology Center.

He stated tranquilizers, unlike exercise, frequently produce unpleasant side effects and slow reaction time. As little as 15 minutes of exercise can alleviate short-term stress and help reduce long-term nervous tension.

Also, the concept that emotional complaints can be prevented, treated and cured.

Seniors warned on diets

OAKLAND — The Alameda County Department on Aging alerts senior citizens and other age groups to the dangers of fad diets.

In their February newsletter, the Alameda County Department on Aging stated, "fad diets are bad diets."

They suggest people keep this in mind when someone tries to convince them that a certain food or diet will restore hair, renew complexions or cure an illness.

They added, the modern faddist is the old-time medicine man in modern dress. The compound he is selling may be harmful or harmless. You have no way of knowing the effect of the product on your body.

"The salesman will discover your particular desire for improvement and slant his pitch accordingly," according to the newsletter.

They cautioned that before you become a regular customer of specialty items identified as health foods, make sure of their real nutritional value. Contact the county health nutritionist, nutritionist at the Social Service Bureau of East Bay or the local cooperative extension service for advice.

Certain fad diets become popular by word of mouth. There are diets that emphasize one special food such as yogurt, grapefruit, wheat germ. These are not harmful foods but they should be used as part of total nutrition — not as the main foodstuff.

Olivia B. Thebus, home economist, reported the best way to prevent becoming a victim of faddists is to know your nutrition facts and keep informed of current findings.

Nuclear waste watchdog reappointed by Governor

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gene Varanini, a state Energy Commission member who favors restrictions on nuclear development, was reappointed to the commission Friday by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

Varanini, 36, was the author of the report endorsed by the commission last week declaring that no safe method has been found yet for permanent storage of radioactive nuclear wastes.

The commission's approval of that report affirmed the state's moratorium on construction of new nuclear power plants.

In another action, Brown reappointed Teamsters Union official Mike Elorduy to the Industrial Welfare Commission, which sets minimum wages and work rules for most private employees in the state.

Varanini, a Democrat, was named by Brown to the five - member commission in July 1976, to serve out the term of Richard Tuttle, who was made a judge by Brown. The term expired last month.

The reappointment is for five years, subject to state Senate confirmation. The job pays $40,764 a year.

Before his appointment, Varanini was chief consultant to the Assembly's energy committee. He was a major draftsman of the Warren - Alquist Act, which created the Energy Commission in 1975, and of the state's 1976 nuclear safety laws.

The Energy Commission has authority over power plant siting and also is responsible for developing energy conservation standards and determining California's long - range energy needs.

Elorduy, 63, has served on the Industrial Welfare Commission since August 1970. He is secretary - treasurer of the Teamsters' state Council of Cannery and Food Processing Unions.

His new term expires in 1981. The job pays $25 a day during meetings and requires Senate confirmation.

Green's 68 leads Hawaiian Open

HONOLULU — Hubert Green continued his sharp-shooting assault on the Waialae Country Club Course Saturday carding a 4 - under - par 68 to take a 3-stroke lead in the $250,000 Hawaiian Open.

Gene Littler, Hale Irwin, George Burns and Bill KrAtzert were tied for second with 54-hole totals of 206. Littler shot a third-round 68, Irwin a 67 and Burns and Kratzert, 69s.

Times SPORTS
Dave Weber, Editor

Green is 13 under par for three rounds with a 69 on the first day and a 66 the second.

A number of golfers are withing striking distance of the lead going into today's national-ly-televised final round.

Bobby Cole, Bill Calfee, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Bobby Wynn were just 4 strokes off the lead.

Scores were extremely low Saturday as the conditions were nearly ideal at the 7,234-yard, par-72 Waialae. Three players — Calfee, Cole and Andy Bean — all had third round 65s.

Although the course is one of the longest on the PGA tour, it is basically a straight layout with true greens and short roughs.

Green, current U.S. Open champion and nearing $1 million in career earnings, began the day at 9 under. He picked up 2 more strokes on par with a 34 on the front nine, then sank birdie putts on the 11th and 13th holes.

Littler, the first-round leader with a 65, bounced back from a second-round 73 to move into contention.

Five players were within 5 shots of the lead going into what could be a wild finish. Bean. Don Bies, Jim Chancey, Bill Rogers and Tom Watson all were at 208.

Watson, winner of two of the four PGA tournaments played this year, had a 69 Saturday.

Those chasing Green were hoping that the final round would be played under less suitable conditions than was the third round.

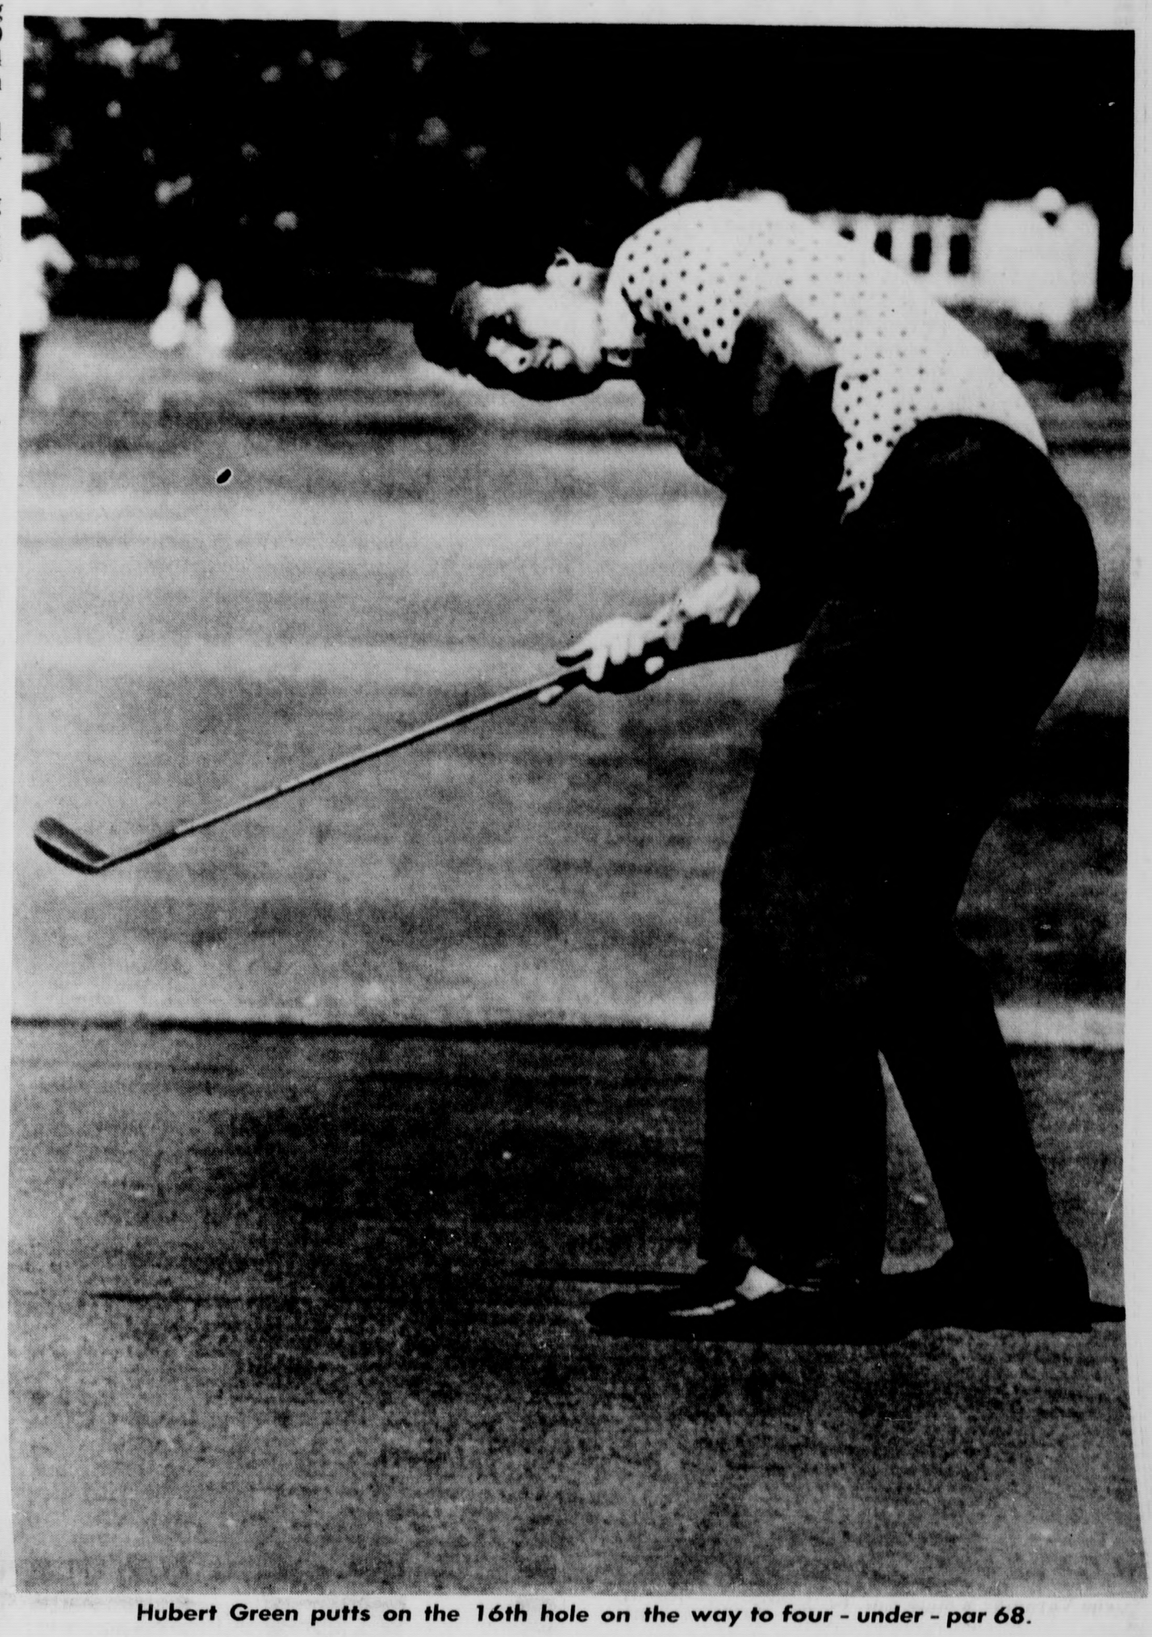
"Needless to say, we had better playing weather this time than for the second round," said Irwin. "But personally I prefer to see the wind. When the wind is not blowing you have to shoot very, very low just to keep up."

Littler, pleased that he could come back after the near-disastrous second round, said he believes it will take a 66 or so to beat Green — providing Green has an off day.

Green himself is not considering the $50,000 winner's check his just yet. "I'm up three shots but there is a logjam out there," he said. "I should be able to win, but it will be a real dogfight."

While happy with his third round, Green said his putting left a little to be desired. "I drove well, my iron play was real good and I was putting pretty good. But actually I missed a couple of easy putts."

— by Associated Press



Hubert Green putts on the 16th hole on the way to four - under - par 68.

Talks end
A's destined to stay?

OAKLAND — Time is running out for a move of the Oakland A's to Denver, and negotiations to get the San Francisco Giants to move half their 1978 baseball games from Candlestick Park to the Oakland Coliseum are bogged down.

Robert T. Nahas, Coliseum president, announced late Friday after a meeting of stadium officials, "We are proceeding to get the field ready for baseball in 1978. No further talks are scheduled. As far as we are concerned, it's business as usual.

And business as usual is likely to be bad again for both the A's and Giants who were at the bottom of their leagues in attendance last year and together lost more than $1,5 million.

Their combined 1977 attendance of 1,196,174 falls short of the 1.3 million which Giants' owner Robert Lurie says his National League club needs to break even this year.

"I'm not through fighting this thing yet," Lurie said. "I want to find out more the reasons for the action. I still believe if we can assure the Coliseum of half of our home dates this season, they will reopen the discussions."

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone, who had balked at sharing the Giants with Oakland on a 50-50 basis, said only that he had been advised by the Oakland officials that compromise plans were "not acceptable."

Denver oilman Marvin Davis agreed two months ago to pay Charles O. Finley $12.5 million for the A's American League franchise and already has made on extension of a time limit on his offer.

He told league president Lee MacPhail at a meeting Thursday in New York he'd leave the door openl r a move to Denver if the dispute over the remaining 10 years of Finley's COliseum lease could be settled quickly.

The San Francisco Chronicle said it learned that the back-off from the plan to replace the A's with part-time Giants resulted from a failure of COliseum officials to get agreement with Finley on a cash payment for the anticpated loss of revenue under such an arrangement.

As things now stand, it would appear the best chance of still getting the one-team situation baseball exectutives from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn on down agree is desirable would be finaancial help from the other major league owners.

There has been no public indiciation such help is forthcoming and it may be necessary not only to free Finley from the Coliseum lease but to ease the San. 1 hancisco taxpapyers' burdon for Candlestick Park which needed nearly $1 million from a hotel tax to pay its maintenance costs and bonds in the past fiscal year.

Williams ready for Nationals

SAN MATEO — Cheri Williams warmed up for today's Bonnie Bell National AAU Women's 10-kilometer championships by taking second in the Examiner Games women's 1,000-yard run trials yesterday at the College of San Mateo here.

Williams, a senior at Livermore High School, ran a solid 2:35.1 to finish behind Judy Graham who won in 2:33.2 Cheri put on a strong finishing kick and edged out Roxanne Bier who ended with a 2:35.2 clocking.

Cheri started out slow but gradually moved up through the pack. She moved into third going into the last lap before putting on a rush that caught Bier.

"I didn't want to start out too fast and get boxed in," she said. "So I waited awhile and tried to work on my speed.

"Actually my time is pretty good for this time of year," she went on. "I mainly came here to work on my speed and get ready for tomorrow's race (today Bonnie championships). I figured working on my speed would help me in the race tomorrow.

Williams finished third in a qualifying race last week for the national championships. Today's race is 6.2 miles long and will be held in Beverly Hills.

"There should be at least 1,200 people there," Williams remarked. "There were over 900 people last week and there should be more tomorrow."

Chabot College's Diana Stohr, an ex-Granada High School runner, finished last in the 1,000-yard run but later ran a strong leg on the Chabot women's mile relay team.

"I'm just not mentally ready not," she said.

Two other ex-Granada athletes, Kathy Honour and Debbie Santa Maria, also performed for the Chabot team. They each ran a leg on the mile relay team and raced in the 60-yard dash. Neither qualified but Honour ran a 7.6 and Santa Maria a 7.8, both respectable clockings. Another Chabot runner, Melanie Radcliffe, ran the other leg of the mile relay team and turned in an 8.4 in the 60.

Kelia Bolton had the fastest 60-yard dash time of 6.9. Tanya Alston and Kris Costello each recorded 8.2s to tie for the best 60-yard hurdles clocking.

In the boy's triple jump Marvin Colter came through with a great effort of 47-6¼ to lead the qualifers. That leap is particuarly impressive since the weather was cold and windy and that can have an adverse effect on triple-jumpers. Fred Cunningham finished second with a fine 46-9½.

The Examiner Game finals will be held Saturday, Feb. 18 at the Cow Palace.

NBA All-Stars praise the game

ATLANTA — Rick Barry of the Golden State Warriors calls it "more than just a show."

Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics says, "We're not going to just go through the motions because we're not used to doing that."

The two National Basketball Association stars were talking about the annual NBA All - Star Game, set for a 1:45 p.m. EST tipoff in the Omni Sunday.

"Too many expect to see the guys show what they can do," said Barry, who calls that one of the problems with an all-star game.

"Basically, what an all - star game should be is a chance for players to show they can blend together," he said. "You should be able to blend into team play."

"I don't know how many minutes people will play, but winning it is a matter of personal pride," said Cowens. "The players who have been chosen are players who obviously take the game very seriously."

Both will be in the starting lineup Sunday — Barry for the slightly favored West team coached by Jack Ramsay, who steered Portland to the NBA championship last year, and Cowens for the East, coached by Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers.

The East Team features two late additions as replacements for injured players.

John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics replaced the NBA's leading scorer, Pete Maravich of New Orleans, and Washington's Elvin Hayes was named as the replacement for Buffalo's Billy Knight.

Havlicek, who announced last Sunday that he will end his illustrious career at the conclusion of this — his 16th — season, will be making a record - tying 13th appearance in an all - star game, a mark shared by Wilt Chamberlain and Bob Cousy.

Cunningham will decide whether to start Havlicek or his own ace guard Doug Collins, but he has indicated it probably would be Collins.

Other East starters will be Philadelphia's Julius Erving, last year's most valuable player in the All - Star game and Larry Kenon of San Antonio at forwards. Cowens will be at center, and San Antonio's George Gervin, second - leading ccorer in the NBA, will hold the other guard slot.

Barry and Portland's Maurice Lucas will open at forwards for the West, Bill Walton of Portland at center and David Thompson of Denver and Paul Westphal of Phoenix at guards.

The starters for each team were selected by a vote of fans, and the remaining spots on the roster were filled by the coaches.

West reserves will be Bob Lanier of Detroit, Artis Gilmore of Chicago, Walter Davis of Phoenix, Bobby Jones of Denver, Brian Winters of Milwaukee and Lionel Hollins of Portland.

Rounding out the East's roster will be Houston's Moses Malone, New York's Bob McAdoo, Buffalo's Randy Smith and New Orleans' Leonard Robinson.

Glance, Nehemiah top stars in Olympic track Invitational

NEW YORK — Collegians Harvey Glance and Renaldo Nehemiah scored impressive victories Saturday night in the U.S. Olympic Invitational Track and Field meet at Madison Square Garden, while veteran Todd Scully set a world indoor record for the 1,500-meter walk.

Glance, a 20-year-old junior at Auburn, won the 55-meter dash in 6.2 seconds, beating Eugen Ray of East Germany, the world's top-ranked 100-meter sprinter last year. The stocky Glance, an Olympic gold medalist on the U.S. 400-meter relay team and the NCAA 100 and 200-meter champion, took the lead shortly after the start and held off the challenge of Ray, making his American debut.

The first two finishers both were timed in 6.2 seconds, as was third-place finisher Jesse Williams of the University of Richmond, but the result was not that close.

The race was missing two of the nation's top sprinters, Steve Williams of San Diego, who had nipped Ray in a controversial close finish in last year's World Cup meet at Dusseldorf, West Germany, and Dr. Delano Meriwether. Both failed to qualify in heats.

Nehemiah, an 18-year-old freshman at Maryland who set the world indoor record for an eletronically timed 60-yard hurdles race last week, skimmed to victory in the 55-meter hurdles in 7.2.

Nehemiah, the nation's outstanding scholastic hurdler last year, was in command throughout and easily beat his Maryland teammate, Greg Robertson, the IC4A champion indoor and outdoor champion. Again, both runners had the same time, but again the finish was not close.

Failing to make the final was Thomas Munkelt, the 110-meter World Cup high hurdles champion from East Germany.

The 29-year-old Scully, a postgraduate student and assistant track coach at Virginia Tech, was timed in 5 minutes 47.9 seconds in erasing his one-yearold record of 5:48.8 for the metric mile walk. It was the third straight victory in the event for Scully, a 1976 Olympian.

Meanwhile, Olympic women's 100-meter hurdles champion Johanna Klier of East Germany made her American debut by winning the 55-meter hurdles in 7.4, beating Deby LaPlante of Englewood, N.J., by one-tenth of a second. The long-legged Kleir bolted into the lead early and never was seriously challenged.

In the women's 55-meter dash, Chandra Cheeseborough, the Pan American Games champion, sprinted to victory in 6.8 seconds, beating Tennessee State teammate Debbie Jones by one-tenth of a second.

Sharon Dabney, the outdoor 400-meter champion, finished second to Lorna Forde of the Adams Track Club in that event. Forde was timed in a meet record 54.6, Dabney in 55.7.

Robinson's jumper tops Cards

LOS ANGELES — Cliff Robinson scored on a short, turn-around jump shot at the final buzzer to give Southern California a 76-74 comeback victory over Stanford Saturday in Pacific Eight Conference basketball.

The Trojans rallied after trailing by four points with 1:24 remaining, as Stanford never got off another shot.

Robinson, a 6-9 center who scored a Pac-8 record of 39 points for a freshman in his last game against California, had 15 points and 11 rebounds against Stanford.

Southern Cal has a 5-2 league record and is 12-8 overall. Stanford fell to 1-6 in the Pac-8, but is 11-9 in all games.

Sophomore guard Don Carfino was the leading scorer for Southern Cal with 18 and another Trojan freshman, Purvis Miller, had 17. Kimberly Belton of Stanford led bOth teams with 23 points and 14 rebounds.

Robinson was on the bench most of the second half with four fouls, returning to action with 4:49 remaining and Stanford ahead 65-64.

But the Cardinals expanded their lead 74-70 with 1:24 to play when Belton scored on a stuff shot.

Freshman guard George Ratkovich of the Trojans hit a 15-foot jump shot a few seconds later. Carfino then stole the ball from the Cardinals and fed a pass to Miller, who made a three-foot jump shot to tie the game at 74-74 with 54 seconds remaining.

A court-length pass by Stanford went out of bounds, and Southern Cal used all the remaining time to set up the winning shot by Robinson only about two feet from the basket.

Still trail Cowboys

Dons crush Dublin

Don't give up on the Amador Valley Dons yet.

Amador Valley, which trails league-leading Livermore by a full game in the East Bay Athletic League varsity basketball race, showed it still has plenty of horsepower left by rolling over visiting Dublin, 70-48 in an EBAL contest Friday night on the Dons' court.

The winners are now 8-2, compared to Livermore's 9-1 record.

Amador Valley jumped to a 17-4 advantage in the first quarter and put the Gaels away easily.

Sparked by center Ken Noble, the Dons fired the ball through the net at better than 70 percent in the first half. Noble ended the contest with a career high of 20 points, with 15 of those coming in the first half when he canned seven of his eight shots from the floor.

Amador Valley made its first five shots and held Dublin to none, including a blocked shot. After taking a big lead late in the first quarter Amador Valley went to a four-corner offense as both Noble and forward Rick Howard got into early foul trouble.

After leading 21-10 at the first quarter break the Dons held steady and gradually increased their margin.

By halftime Amador Valley had a 38-21 advantage and was doing an effective job of keeping the ball away from the Gaels.

Dublin made nine of 16 shot attempts from the floor in the first half but that was all the shots the losers managed in that period of time.

Besides Nobles' outstanding output the Dons had three other players in double figures. Howard finished the night's work with 11 markers. Chris Kearns and Rob Santos each added 10 points and Greg Kragen tallied nine.

Dane Seropian had one of his best games for the Gaels this season, scoring 16 points. Jeff Barnes added nine markers.

The third period was a slow-down game as Amador Valley scored 11 points and the Gaels could manage just eight. However, the final quarter saw the opposite style of game.

The Dons swished the nets for 21 points and Dublin canned 19 markers. Amador Valley had nine players hit the scoring column while the Gaels had eight player in scoring figures.

Dublin was hurt when two of its players fouled out.

The Gaels, now 3-7 in EBAL action, travel to Danville to play Monte Vista in their next encounter Wednesday night. Amador Valley will host San Ramon.

Free throws aid 'Pokes

DANVILLE — A steady stream of free throws helped Livermore High School breeze past San Ramon High Friday night, 68-57 and maintain its top position in the East Bay Athletic League basketball race.

The Cowboys, now 9-1, spent most of the evening at the line, converting 28 of 44 attempts, to keep the stubborn Wolves, 3-7, out of striking distance.

Dick Patterson scored 11 of his game-high 17 points in the first half, mostly from inside, as the Cowboys built an 11-point advantage at halftime.

Center Brian Schweiger was also effective during the first half from under the basket, forcing San Ramon into a more physical defense and eventual foul trouble.

By the end of the first two quarters, the officials had detected 16 Wolf fouls, and the Cowboys had made 24 trips to the charity stripe.

Livermore also made good use of its few shots from the field, canning 14 of 26 attempts during the first 16 minutes, but found shots even scarcer in the second half, launchinq just 16 tries and hitting six of them.

The Cowboys widened their lead to as much as 17 points midway through the last stanza, but a Wolf spurt brought the hosts to within 12 points with just under three minutes remaining.

Livermore then went into a four-corner stall, forcing San Ramon to foul, and John Farfan iced the game with five points from the charity line.

The expected battle between Farfan and Mike Campbell, two of the loops. top scorers, never materialized, as both were guarded judiciously. Farfan finished the night with 10 points, but hit only one of six field goal attempts.

Campbell enjoyed even less success, tallying only three second half buckets. Defensed tightly by Bob Bolen, Campbell managed only one shot in each of the two opening quarters.

Schweiger backed up Patterson's scoring with 15 points of his own, while Bolen added twelve. Darrin Johnson led San Ramon with 13 points, but sank only four of his 16 floor attempts.

Falcons upset California

A big second quarter proved to be the difference as Foothill High School's basketball team toppled host California 57-50 in an East Bay Athletic League contest Friday night in San Ramon.

The Falcons, now 2-8, outscored the Grizzlies 17-7 in the second period. California dropped to a 5-5 record.

Rick Rosenbach, who led all the Falcon scorers with 18 markers, hit on six of eight attempts from the field in the first half. He was particularly effective in the second quarter as the Grizzlies committed several turnovers.

Rosenbach, Mike Buckley and Dan Bosold all were effective against the Grizzlies. Rosenbach and Kevin Haraughty were especially hot from the outside.

The Grizzlies went into their four-corner offense but without much success. Despite a height advantage California did not go to the inside that much and chose to take risky shots from the outside instead.

The Falcons alos used a four-corner offense but it was more effective than the one used by the Grizzlies.

Foothill increased its advantage to as much as 19 points in the third quarter as Mitch Pereira hit a free throw with five minutes left to give the 'Birds a 41-22 lead.

But the Grizzlies improved in the last quarter, mostly behind the fine shooting of Brian Green.

Green tallied 19 points to lead all scorers and tallied the losers' last 11 points.

The Falcons were particularly hot from the free throw line, not missing a charity attempt until less than four minutes remained in the third quarter.

Buckley added 12 markers to Foothill's total and Bosold and Mitch Pereira each tallied nine points.

Chuck Cary was second for the Grizzlies with eight points, six of them coming on free throws. Adam Moore added seven markers on three field goals and one charity shot.

Mats beat MV, stay alive

Granada High, faced with elimination from the playoff race, rallied from a series of bad luck incidents to pull out a 58-50 win over Monte Vista Friday in East Bay Athletic League basketball play in Livermore.

It didn't matter in the end that the Mats were shortchanged a point in the third quarter, when the official scorekeeper failed to record a free throw tossed in with 2:04 to go in the period by Steve Robison. Robison had made the first of a pair of free throws and missed the second. the only one noticed by the table.

But the Matadors were hard put to argue, since the home team supplies the scorekeeper, and play went on without any serious consequences resulting from the oversight.

A 42-40 lead going into the fourth quarter was upped to 44-40 when Granada's Dan Lambert, who led all scorers with 22 points, drove for bucket. But MV's gunning forward Randy Woods popped home a jumper, two of his 14 points, to pull the 'Stangs back to within two.

An inside lay - in by Scott Morton and a pair of free throws by Sophomore Matt Watson gave Granada a 48-42 lead, and Monte Vista could never get closer than four points from that point on.

Morton backed Lambert with a 12 - point effort, dominating the boards for the taller Mats. Steve Robison also scored in double figures for Granada with five field goals and ten points, while Mike Shepanek threw in 12 for Monte Vista.

Lambert and Robison each scored six points in the first quarter to give the Mats a 15-11 opening stanza lead. In the second quarter, the margin was increased to 24-15 with 4:20 to play when Watson scored two baskets, pumped home a free throw and Morton swished a pair of charity tosses added to a field goal.

After Wes Karch's steal and subsequent lay - in gave the Mats a 28-19 lead with 2:38 to play, the Mustangs took advantage of the Granada regulars resting on the bench and ripped off a 10-3 spurt to close the quarter trailing by only two points, 31-29.

Granada's offensive stagnancy continued in the third quarter, as Monte Vista finally went ahead for the first time since the opening minutes, 37-35, on a tip - in by Rich Gray with 5:16 left in the quarter.

For the next three minutes, a total offensive discord for both teams developed and neither squad could put a point on the scorebaord until Morton muscled in for a game - tying lay - in with 2:16 remaining.

Robison should have put the Mats ahead with his free throw, 38-37, but at the end of the quarter the point was lost and the Mats didn't actually regain the lead again until Lambert drove for a basket with 24 seconds left in the quarter for a 41-39 advantage on the scoreboard, 40-39 in the scorebook.

After Gray made one of two free throws to "tie" the game at 40.40 with :11 showing, the Mats moved the ball quickLy downcourt and Lambert swished a curling 20-foot prayer from the corne for a 42-40 lead.

The scoreboard read 43-40 at the time, but the change didn't go into effect until the referees conferred with the scorekeeper, which overruled the scoreboard keeper.

Granada move into a fourth - place tie with Monte Vista, both teams harboring 5-5 records. It was the Mustangs' fourth straight defeat, and a much - needed win for the Mats. A loss would have dropped them two games behind fourth place with four games to go in the chase for the final Shaughnessy playoff berth.

Maheras captures Albany handicap

ALBANY, Calif. — Maheras, a 5-year-old owned by Pete Cristofi of Arcadia, Calif., won the $26,950 Albany Handicap at Golden Gate Fields Saturday in 1:02 1-5, clipping a fifth of a second from a 12-year-old track record for 5½ furlongs.

A.L. Diaz rode Maheras to a 2½-length victory over Dr. Henry K. to gain the $15,700 winner's share. He carried 122 pounds and paid $4, $3 and $2.20.

In eclipsing the old mark set by Dardanus, Maheras broke well and drew clear rounding the far turn. It was his first victory since he won the Albany Handicap a year ago.

Dr. Henry K. paid $5 and $2.60 for place, and Neat Claim returned $2.40 for show in the field of five 3-year-olds and up.

Muldowney makes qualifying round

POMONA, Calif. — Just in time, Shirley Muldowney finally got her Top Fuel dragster through the quarter mile in less than six seconds Saturday, to make the field of 16 cars for Sunday's eliminations at the 18th Annual Winternationals of drag racing.

Miss Muldowney, the 1977 National Hot Rod Association champion from Mount Clemens, Mich., had poor runs Thursday and again Friday. But her last try Saturday produced a 5.975 seconds clocking and sixth place among the qualifiers.

Don Garlits, Seffner, Fla., holds top spot with his 5.777 seconds in Friday's run. In the first round of eliminations, Garlits meets Richard Tharp, Houma, La., who had the meet's top speed of 250.69 miles per hour as he crossed the finish line Friday. Tharp's elapsed time, however, was 5.997 seconds.

Miss Muldowney will face the 14th qualifier, Larry Sutton, Cypress, Calif., in the first round Sunday. Ten of the qualifiers beat six seconds. Sutton at 6.038 was among the remaining qualifiers just a blink above six seconds.

In the Funny Car qualifying, Don Prudhomme of Granada Hills, Calif., had Saturday's fastest time of 6.177 seconds, but he enters eliminations in third behind Tripp Shumake of Phoenix, Ariz., with 6.157 and Tommy Ivo of Burbank, Calif., at 6.159.

The fastest Pro Stock qualifier was Bob Glidden, Whiteland, Ind., in 8.590 seconds, but his competition is closely bunched behind him. All 16 qualifiers were at 8.904 or faster, breaking a Pro Stock field record set at the NHRA Fallnationals in Seattle, Wash., last year.

Vadnais top wrestler

Glad matmen roll to NorCal title

FREMONT — The Chabot College wrestling team lived up to its own expectations at the Northern California Junior College Wrestling Tournament at Ohlone College here Friday.

The Gladiators had eight members of the squad and an alternate qualify for the upcoming state tournament, alomg along with capturing the team championship with 135½ points, well ahead of second-place Ohlone with 84¾ points.

Chabot head coach Zack Papachristos had predicted at least seven of his wrestlers would place.

"We were very confident. I was only worried about recovering from the injuries we've been plagued with this season," Papachristos commented.

Although five members of the Gladiator squad were in and out of the lineup because of bad ankles, knees, and shoulders, the Glads also managed to remain undefeated in the Golden Gate Conference.

Brad Vadnais, dominating the 142-pound weight division, was named the Outstanding Wrestler of the NorCal Tournament. He took first in his weight class, bu it wasn't easy.

"He beat the number-one rated kid in the state, 5-3. It was a match that went to the wire. He beat Mike Freedenberg of West Valley in the last seconds of the match," Papachristos outlined.

Another first place winner in the tournament, was 126-pounder Jesse Bails. He had a tough match with a strong defensive challenger, Diablo Valley's Dave Robinson. it was another close one, as he clinched the 4-3 victory in the last 30 seconds.

"He's really been coming on strong this last week. He's completely changed as a wrestler, mentally," Papachristos said in praise.

One grappler that didn't fare as well, but still managed to place fourth in the 118-pound weight division was Bruce Kawabata. who has been outstanding otherwise all season. Papachristos was less than pleased.

"I think one of the only disappointments was Bruce. I felt he should have been in the finals," he said.

"He just wasn't very aggressive. He didn't wrestle to his potential," the mentor explained.

The disguntled coach explained that part of the problem was a tough match against Steve Lutz.

"They shouldn't have been seeded the way they were, on the same side of the chart like that," he complained.

According to Papachristos, the tournament seeding was bad anyway.

"People were hurt and out for a lenghty period of time, but they still got first-seeds," he noted.

Another upset that occurred was Doug Johnson of Foothill blitzing former Dublin High star Kevin Dugan in the 158-pound weight division. But Papachristos explained that Dugan was very aggressive and through that lost the match.

"He got caught on a 'five-point move and lost. But I must say the officating wasn't up to par. He's been hurting, and hasn't fully recovered. Kevin is in a class by himself, but that one mistake was costly," the Chabot coach noted.

Bill Choate has adjusted well to dropping 10 pounds in the past two weeks. Entering the tournament in the 167-pound division, for the first time this season, Choate captured first place for Chabot by dominating Rocky Harrison of College of the Redwoods, 6-3.

"He's more comfortable at the lower weights, and he's in better shape. I dropped him because it makes us a stronger team for the state tournament," the Gladiator coach explained. Tom Thomsen, coming off of a dislocated shoulder, captured the second spot as a heavyweight. Because of the caliber of his scheduled challenger, and because the coach doesnt want to risk any more injuries, Thomsen didn't wrestle in the finals. of his weight class.

"We forfeited. He's had some minor pains, including his shoulder, and we thought we'd rest him. He would have been going up against Skyline's Greg Schoene," the coach said. Thomsen eliminated Schoene three weeks ago.

Gaels keep lead

Oxsen's late goal saves AV

For 38 minutes and 44 seconds of the Amador Valley-Foothill soccer game Friday afternoon it appeared neither team would go away from the game happy.

Both teams had played brillant defensive ball and neither club had managed to put a ball through the nets.

Then Greg Oxsen of host Amador fired in a 10-yard shot from the left side at an angle and the Dons came away with a thrilling 1-0 victory.

The win keeps Amador Valley in the running for the East Bay Athletic League championship with a 10-1-1 record but eliminates the Falcons, who are now 8-4.

Each team was playing with 10 men at the end of the contest as Steve Englebrick of AV and the Falcons' Matt Leaf were each given red cards in the second period.

After Englebreck was ejected early in the period it seemed to fire the Dons up and they put steady pressure on Foothill's outstanding goalie Dave Konecny. Oxsen narrowly missed a goal with 16 minutes gone in the half when he booted the ball a couple of feet to the right of the Falcon net.

When Leaf left the contest it appeared that neither team would score as both Konecny and Amador Valley goalie Scott Kinney each turned away several scoring opportunities.

But Oxsen brought an end to the suspense with his brillant shot as he swerved between two Foothill defenders and fired the ball in.

"I didn't even see the score," said a happy Amador Valley coach Mike Geib after the contest.

Geib wasn't suprised that his team was able to move well on offense with one man short when Englebrick was out.

"We practice so that when we lose a player somebody else can go and cover for him," he commented. "But as far as this match goes, it was the toughest of the season for us. It was played with great intentsity on both teams' parts. Foothill has a lot of class and it showed it today."

Foothill coach Dave Hartman praised his team's effort.

"It was a super game," he remarked. "I'm really proud of my teams' play. They played up to their ability today."

The Dons had 15 shots on poal to eight for the Falcons. Konecny had 11 saves, including eight in the first half. Kinney finished with eight saves and was backed up well by the Amador Valley fullbacks.

Amador Valley also had an advantage in corner kicks, getting nine to six for the Falcons.

Dublin 4, California 0

Dublin stayed in first place with a convicing 4-0 victory over visiting California Friday afternoon.

The win gives the Gaels an 11-1-1 mark in EBAL action, two points ahead of second-place Amador Valley.

Paul Mangini scored the first two Dublin goals as the Gaels took a 2-0 halftime lead. His first goal came on an assist from Jorge Garrett and his second on a 2-yard boot which John Downino passed to him.

In the second half Finley Boag scored on a direct penalty kick and Luke Bryant added the final goal on a 10-yard unassisted shot.

The Gaels had 28 shots on goal while holding California to four. However, Dave Nielson was a standout for the losers, garnering 12 saves in the nets as goaltender.

California had seven corner kicks to three for the winners.

Dublin travels to AV Wednesday with the probable EBAL championship at stake.

Granada 3, Livermore 2

After the Cowboys took a 2-0 advantage Granada roared back to take the victory. Mark Robison scored the first Matador goal late in the first half un an unassisted tally. Steve D'Ambra tied the score early in the second period when he fired a 30-yard shot past 'Poke goalie Ricky Woods.

Corey Cruz, a sophomore playing his first varsity contest since being brought up from the junior varsity, tallied the winning goal on a 15-yard boot with eight minutes left.

Granada now has a 9-2-2 EBAL mark but has been eliminated from the pennant race.

Stompers sign Mrosko

OAKLAND — The Oakland Stompers have acquired German striker Carl Mrosko to help make their offensive attack more wide-open.

Mrosko has been one of the top scorers in the tough Bundesleague in Germany.

The Stompers' newest addition will be on a loan agreement this season, with an option to purchase. The current purchase price is $500,000, but that seems certain to drop some when his contract with the Hannover club of Bundesleague expires in June.

Mroski will arrive in Oakland March, 26 and should be ready to go in the Stompers' first-ever home game on Sunday, April 2 against the San Jose Earthquakes at the Oakland Coliseum.

The 30-year old German star has played over 300 games in the Bundesleague, most of them in the First Division. He has scored 80 goals in two and one-half seasons and is one of the better scorers in the German leagues.

The addition of Mroski gives the Stompers one of the better front lines in the North American Soccer League.

On Thursdays, the Lords Ice Cream League for Pee Wees and Preps ages six to nine and 10 to 12 are in action. Double Scoop of ice cream will be awarded weekly. On Friday nights the Youth/Adults League at 6:30 and the popular Round Table Pizza League for youths six to 18 will be held on Saturday at 9:30 a.m. with Pizza Certicates given weekly.

All leagues include trophies, patches, discount card for open bowling, shoes and bowling. Interested youths may sign up now by calling Granada Bowl at 447-5600. You may also contact Granada Bowl at 1620 Railroad Avenue in Livermore.

Earthquakes sign Calloway

SAN JOSE — Laurie Calloway, the San Jose Earthquakes' Most Valuable Player in 1977, has signed a one-year contract with the 'Quakes for the 1978 North American Soccer League season.

The 5-foot-10, 165 pound defender has been honored with selection to the All-NASL squad in 1974 in addition to his MVP award last season. He played 25 of 26 games last year, scoring two goals and getting four assists from his defensive spot. He has played in 71 games for San Jose in four years.

"Laurie is definitely part of our plans for 1978," commented coach Gabbo Gavric. "I'm glad that we have agreed to terms."

The year old veteran played for the Wolverhampton Nanderers in England, going from there to Shrewesbury Town before the Earthquakes discovered him in 1974.

New openings in WC at executive park

The second phase of development at Interland Corporation's Walnut Creek Executive Park is now in full swing, according to Norm Meltzer, vice president of Real Estate.

Construction has just been completed on the first of three buildings planned in Phase II at the Executive Park, situated at 2001 Oak Grove Boulevard.

"Companies looking for a creative environment in a relaxed setting have found our Executive Park to be the ideal choice," stressed Meltzer.

As with Interland's other award-winning developments, there is heavy emphasis on the use of natural wood, meandering waterways, and lush landscaping at the Walnut Creek facility.

"Several of the park's current tenants, including National Car Rental and Mid-Pacific Communications, have doubled their office space since moving in," Meltzer pointed out.

The Hartford Insurance Group and The Travelers Insurance Company maintain major facitities, each occupying their own 30,000 square foot buildings. Other clients include the Western Regional Headquarters of Dow Chemical Company, Chevron U.S.A., and Park Brothers.

Striking architectural design and beautiful, water oriented landscaping characterize Interland's Walnut Creek Executvie Park.

Five model homes are celebrating their grand opening at The Country Place in San Ramon.

Five new plans available at SR's Country Place

Five model homes have had their grand opening at the Country Place in San Ramon, a new development of 204 one and two story homes by Larwin Northern California.

Sixty-three homes have been released during the presale period and to date more than 60 percent have been purchased.

Country Place offers five new floor plans and 15 distinctive treatments available for the first time in Northern California. The homes are priced from $73,990 to $92,990 with conventional financing available.

Homes range from the three bedroom, two bath Wheatfield model with 1,1448 square-feet to the Cornfield plan with four bedrooms and two and one-half baths with 2,190 square-feet. One, the Butterfield, has five bedrooms in a single story design.

Country Place homes include features like exterior wood siding, concrete tile roofs, step down living rooms with wood burning fireplaces, ceramic tile entries, formal dining rooms and air conditioning.

"Public acceptance to Country Place even before the models were constructed has been excellent and now with the enthusiasm generated by our grand openings we expect our first two construction phases to be sold out shortly," said Rod Stevenson, president of Larwin Northern California.

"In addition to exceptional floor plans and innovative designs, our convenient location has undoubtedly stimulated sales," he added.

Country Place is close to shopping centers and places of employment. Elementary, junior and senior high schools are within a five minute walk.

Country Place is at Montevideo Road, reached from Highway 680 by Alcosta Boulevard east four miles then left one block at Montevideo.

Homes in phase I are expected to be ready for occupancy in late spring with completion of phase II scheduled for late summer.

Models are open daily except Friday from 10 a.m. to dusk. For further information visit them or call 829-2164.

B of A has big loan hike

SAN FRANCISCO — Bank of America, the leading real estate lender among U.S. banks, said today its long-term real estate loan volume increased 71 percent during 1977 to $2.65 billion from $1.55 billion in the previous year.

The bank also made short-term construction loans totaling $1 billion in 1977, an increase of 73 percent from $578 million in 1976.

George H. Haley, senior vice president for real estate loans, said real estate loan closings were at high levels at the end of the year, "although reduced considerably from the levels in the spring and summer of the year."

Loans for single-family dwellings totaled $1.55 billion and accounted for 58 percent of the long-term dollar volume during 1977. They made up 87 percent of the 35,159 loans made during the year.

Long-term loans for income properties (including residential, commercial, industrial and other) amounted to $1.10 billion, or 42 percent of the long-term total.

Builders beware during 1978

It will be "cautious but good times" for the building industry in 1978, according to one of the Bay Area's leading builders.

Joe Duffel, Duffel Construction Co., Lafayette, recently told members of the Associated Building Industry of Northern California's (AIB) Young Home Builders council that "1977 was the greatest year for the industry since the end of World War II, but 1978 would be a year of "conservatism and caution."

Duffel, who helped to organize the council in 1966, said the key factor for conservatism and caution would be the money market. Because of governmental deficit spending and the imbalance of international payments there is a "danger that money will dry up in the short run" for the building in 1978, he said.

Speaking in San Leandro, Duffel said financial organizations could restrict money flow and increase interest rates. "It is a time of caution, a time to show conservatism."

However, Duffel added it is not the time to stand still in the building industry. He forecast that construction would pick up in the latter part of 1978 and by the end of the year, builders would have an inventory of residential units. "I see cautious but good times in 1978," Duffel predicted.

Duffel told his audience that his company is moving ahead with residential and commercial projects in 1978. The builder commented, "You got to hedge your bets."

The veteran builder forecast a renewed interest in multiple family housing. Duffel plans major apartment and townhouse projects in Concord, Martinez, Sausalito and Fresno.

Also under way are single family homes in Reno.

Young execs say luxury homes the key

Is a luxury home the key to the executive door for young businessmen?

Some seem to think so — and even their parents can be appalled at the thought of a darling son tuned into a $1,000-a-month house payment.

One father made a grandiose move, he says. His son had worked hard to put himself through college and was having difficulty repaying his student loan even though he now had a good job.

"He had been married four years and we made a big decision when their first child arrived — why not buy them a house?"

This father couldn't really afford it, but as he says, "We could always borrow because we have a good credit rating, and the $20,000 cash we could use for this purpose was well invested, we thought."

The house purchased was a starter ranch in the New York suburbs. The young people were delighted.

Two years later the son announced he was moving into a bigger house. His dad decided it best not to ask too many questions. They would soon find out, he said.

They couldn't believe their eyes — even before they got out of their car, the landscaping, long driveway and a four-car garage added up to a $100,000 home package.

"You've hit an oil well!" father exclaimed incredulously to son.

"No matter the sacrifice, if you want to succeed in business, or whatever, you must live elegantly and get a reputation for observing amenities — like serving the right wine, the son told his father. In fact, he suspects his lifestyle had helped him win his recent promotion.

The attitude of that businessman seems to be the prevailing one even with some younger fellows in graduate business schools.

"First, I'm not staying in this city because living conditions aren't that great," one 23-year-old graduate student in his last year told his parents. He was referring to a popular city where his university is located.

"I'd like a nice condominium for a few years, maybe in a suburb near New York City or on the West Coast, maybe then I would buy a house when I could afford a big one," he rambled on.

This young man has noted, he says, that his friends who are new in business have a greater chance of success if they live well and entertain in an assured manner.

"You can move up faster, it seems, if you show stable qualities like the ability to handle your own small estate," he said.

Some young business bachelors involved in the house status idea opt for lush apartments and city living.

Glass, plants and deep pile rugs can provide an opulent look on a budget, one suggested.

"I can't see how a rising executive can rush home each night to a lot of domestic chores — cats, dogs and garbage to take out. He needs good maintenance help, which can be found in a good apartment."

One young man would live as close to his work as possible. He thinks commuting is passe, breeds bad dispositions and leaves little time for the family, the main reason usually for living in the suburbs.

He has a few more years before he must make such a decision — he, too, is in graduate school. But he can tell you how he plans to decorate the apartment when he acquires one.

Broadmoor hails record year

Broadmoor Homes, Inc., a California building firm headquartered in Southern California (Orange County), has enjoyed record sales in excess of $120 million for the 1977 calendar year, according to a recent announcement by Richard B. Smith, president. "The success in the Northern Calfiornia marketplace has been instrumental in reaching this record high."

A diversified real estate development company, Broadmoor Homes has generated a major portion of the year's benchmark sales record from the sale of residential properties in both Northern and Southern California. Additional revenues were generated from both bulk land sales and joint venture opportunities.

As Smith pointed out, Broadmoor is accelerating its growth pattern through expansion into additional California market areas and continued product diversification.

Early in 1976, Broadmoor entered the Northern California market with its Crow Canyon Country Club, a $90 million project located near Danville. In addition to three housing types, this ambitious development contains a 34,000 - square - foot clubhouse, a 13-court tennis complex and an 18-hole golf course.

Another project, Seabridge, at Redwood Shores, on the peninsula, got underway in early 1977. (This development was a recent recipient of several Major Achievement in Merchandising Excellence MAME awards, among which was a grand award.)

"Both developments have been extremely successful," Smith said. In less than nine months, over 400 homes were sold, representing a volume figure in excess of $40 million.

Moreover, Broadmoor is currently building single family and townhome projects in the San Jose area and Walnut Creek, and other property parcels are being negotiated.

"We could not be more pleased with our continued success here in Northern California," said Roger Menard, vice president and general manager of Broadmoor's Northern California Regional division. "Each Broadmoor community reflects our desire to build homes that will be enjoyed by future generations as much as this one. Careful attention to land planning, responsible construction techniques and fine floor plans has resulted in Broadmoor's nationwide reputation as one of the country's finest builders of new homes."

In Southern California, four projects were completed in the 1977 calendar year. Broadmoor Sea View, a view-oriented community located on a 50-acre hillside, overlooking the city of Newport Beach and the ocean, is a limited edition of 167 zero side-yard, single family homes which ranged in price from $125,000 to $250,000.

Woodbridge Patio Homes, in the Irvine Village of Woodbridge offered 289 homes ranging in price from $78,990 to $105,990.

Broadmoor Park, Orange, is a 202-unit development located on 75 acres in the planned community of Orange Park Acres and is within the City of Orange. This development received one of only six "Grand Awards" presented to builders in 14 western states for new construction in 1975 during the Pacific Coast Builders Conference in 1976. Extensive recreational amenities include two village lakes, four tennis courts, swimming center, a network of bridle trails, an equestrian ring, and stabling facility. The homes were priced from $72,490 to $102,400.

Also in Irvine were the Turtle Rock Glen Patio Homes, 142 single family homes which ranged in price from $93,400 to $113,400. This project is a part of the village of Turtle Rock also planned and developed by The Irvine Company.

Broadmoor's expansion has accelerated at such a rapid pace within the last decade that it has become one of California's leading homebuilding firms. In addition to its Northern and Southern (Orange County) California offices it also has opened a regional office in San Diego, which serves Broadmoor's building activity in the San Diego County area.

Because of its rapid expansion, seen predominantly within the last five years, Broadmoor has moved into new corporate offices in Dublin, which is capable of housing its some 137 employees.

But acceleration continues, said Smith. Broadmoor has numerous developments planned for an even busier 1978, many in Southern California as well as Northern California, and many which are already in the early construction stages. These include single family, patio and townhomes in Laguna Niguel, Yorba Linda, Huntington Beach, Irvine, and various San Diego County areas, as well as the aforementioned Northern California projects.

Broadmoor Homes, Inc., is a California corporation, founded in 1959 by its president Richard B. Smith. It is a subsidiary of Genstar Limited. Genstar has operations in Canada, the United States and internationally. Genstar is listed on the New York, Toronto, Montreal, Alberta, Vancouver, Brussels and Antwerp Stock Exchanges.

When homes aren't well insured

Last summer some Santa Barbara residents learned the hard way the dangers of under insurance when brush fires destroyed their homes.

At least once a year all California home owners should check into whether their insurance coverage is keeping pace with the increasing value of their homes and contents, the Insurance Information Institute suggests.

The cost of labor and materials used in new and existing homes has increased spectacularly in recent years. Home owners who have not reviewed their insurance coverage periodically may find their existing policies fall far short of the amount needed to repair a damaged home or replace a completely destroyed one.

In addition to the cost of the materials themselves, labor costs have added to the climb in the price of building and repairing homes. The average hourly wage nationally for all contract construction workers has risen from $6.06 in 1972, to $8.19 in September, 1977, an increase of 35 percent.

If you're like the majority of property owners, you have purchased a special package insurance policy for your house, called a "homeowners policy." Applying to this package of coverages is the "replacement cost provision," which gives you an advantage when it comes to claims for partial damages to your home. At the time of a partial loss this provision eliminates depreciation costs on claims involving damage to the building and you receive payment from you insurance company based on the full cost of repairing the damage. This provision does require, however, that a home owner carry insurance that equals a certain percentage of the value of the house. This required percentage of insured value varies from company to company but is usually 80 or 90 per cent of the house's replacement cost.

Making certain that your current insurance policy has kept up with the increasing value of the house and still meets the required 80 or 90 per cent clause keeps the replacement cost provision in effect. Allowing the face value of the policy to slip below this required percentage means that the insurance company would pay less than the cost of repairing any damage and the extra cost would come out of your own pocket.

Growth in leaps and bounds

DUBLIN — Better Homes is one of the leading most respected names in the California Real Estate industry.

Situated on the Alameda-Contra Costa county line is one of Better Homes most successful offices located at the heart of publin's business district.

In ten short months owners Tony Pietrafitta and Bruce DeHaas and their growing staff of 16 people had over $7 million in transactions of residential and commercial property.

Better Homes Dublin offices are located at 7000 Village Parkway.

Real Estate

Racial charges filed

SAN FRANCISCO — The filing of racial discrimination charges against a bay area real estate broker was announced today Feb. 1 by the California Department of Real Estate.

According to Department Director David H. Fox, broker Richard I. Reiss dba Red Carpet Realtors of Alameda (450 Park Street, Alameda) has been formally accused of illegally raising the rent of a black tenant five times more than the increase for white tenants in virtually identical apartments in the same building. The three white tenants of the property managed by Reiss were notified of a $10.00 rent raise, while the only black tenant received a $50.00 increase.

Reiss is also charged with unlawfully authorizing collection of rents by an unlicensed person.

"This action seeking revocation or suspension of the broker's license follows California's recent adoption of the toughest anti-discrimination regulations in the nation," Fox stated.

Emphasizing that "discrimination — free housing opportunities are fundamental rights of every individual," Fox urged anyone encountering discrimination in a real estate transaction to immediately contact the California Department of Real Estate at any of its district offices located in San Francisco, Sacramento, Fresno, Los Angeles, Santa Ana, or San Diego.

'Helping people out'

The eviction business

Giving people the heave-ho means food on the table for Dave Schindler.

Schindler, a jolly gray-haired man, operates Property Protection Plan, a business that specializes in throwing people out of the houses and apartments they rent.

A long-time landlord, Schindler figured several years ago that he could be of service to other landlords and make a fairly decent living for himself by offering to evict undesireable tenants.

One might figure that evicting people from their homes could be a pretty emotional business, perhaps laced with close shaves and near-close shaves with people who weren't happy about being put out on the street.

But Schindler says that isn't the case.

"It's all very impersonal," he said.

Usually, a sheriff's deputy is the person who actually has to throw a family out on the street.

The folks at Property Protection Plan make the arrangements for the family's departure, including the filing of court documents, serving of supoenas and and trying to convince the people to move away peacefully.

Each eviction costs $100, plus expenses. But larger customers, such as firms which own large apartment buildings, get a slightly lower rate, Schindler said.

The former Contra Costan said his firm evicts about 200 people a month.

Although the company operates in 13 Northern California counties, Schindler said the bulk of the evictions occur in Oakland, San Francisco and San Jose.

As for Contra Costa, the majority of the evictions here involve people who have rented apartments in Concord.

"We absolutely do not use anything but legal means to remove nonpaying tenants," Schindler commented.

In addition to "deadbeats," Scindler says his company evicts people whom landlords consider "undesireable."

He recalled one man in Concord who was evicted because he had thrown a woman into the swimming pool from a third-floor balcony. The incident had angered the landlord, Schindler said.

In another case, a woman tenant was "operating a bordello." And again, the landlord in question became angered and called on Schindler's organization to effect the eviction.

Schindler noted that he employs a private detective and off-duty policemen "who are big men" to aid in evictions.

"But we use no force," he stressed.

Schindler, who has been a real estate broker and in the property management business since 1946, said his chief concern is make sure a landlord continues to have a revenue-producing property.

Usually it takes no more than three weeks to throw a tenant out. The stickier cases can take as long as five weeks, he said.

Often, the people who are evicted aren't welfare cases. Instead, they are people who cannot make their rent payments for one reason or another, Schindler said.

He noted that because welfare is available, along with accompanying housing subsidies, no one is actually "put on the street." "Housing is a social thing. It's not like a loaf of bread where you either pay your 75 cents for it or not. People do not equate that with paying the landlord the rent.

Many think they're supposed to supply them with houses," Schindler concluded.

Castlewood Country Club
Open House
by appointment
Sun. Feb. 5, 1978

Where, but in Castlewood Country Club, could the discriminating buyer find the secluded luxury represented in this elegant home? Nestled among huge shade trees, this meticulously constructed home with wood exterior blends the serenity of the area with unique features geared towards those who desire a setting for casual or formal entertaining. A paved drive offers easy access to the detached three car garage/shop. The entrance to the home is enhanced by low maintenance landscaping, front decking and custom designed and installed stained glass in and around the front door. Off the large kitchen designed for the gourmet cook is a cozy breakfast nook and formal dining room with random plank flooring and magnificent views. The spacious living room is centered around a floor to ceiling stone fireplace and massive window areas that open to the full length deck outside and private panoramas. The bedroom and bath areas on the entry level contain large closets and deep storage areas.

For fantastic entertaining, for in-laws, out - of - town guests, or teenage slumber parties, the downstairs level offers the utmost in luxury and convenience. Two bedrooms with massive storage spaces, a modern bath and laundry room blend superbly with the crowning glory of this delightful home: a fully equipped kitchen with pass - through to the large family room with a floor - to - ceiling brick fireplace. This room is tastefully appointed in plush chocolate carpeting and real wood paneling. Easy access to the pool sized back yard and patio is achieved through sliding glass doors from the family room.

This large home with approximately 3000 square feet is priced for sale at $195,000. If you are the discriminating buyer interested in the luxury of superb living in Castlewood Country Club, call me for an exclusive showing today.

Being 6-foot-1 definitely helps California Highway Patrol Officer Karen Johnson command some authority. She is in the Concord area from Indio, Calif. to recruit other women for work as patrol officers.

CHP wants a few good women

"I've learned more about the male ego than I really cared to," says Officer Karen Johnson. "It's a touchy subject."

Johnson is one of California's 12 female Highway Patrol officers. She works on the road, not behind a desk, and her presence in uniform has aroused both the curiosity and resentment of many persons — those she stops on the highway, her fellow officers and even her husband.

"The other officers were skeptical at first. Everyone was skeptical," the 6-foot-1-inch blonde told members of the press yesterday. "But when an officer sees women out there performing a job, he accepts us."

Johnson, 28, does the same job with the same amount of ability as any other officer. After three years on patrol, she said, she finally has about 80 percent acceptance from those around her.

"We were told when we were hired that it might not work," she said. "But my class was so successful that women will always be on the Highway Patrol."

In order to supplement the number of women officers now working for the CHP, February has been designated as a recruiting month, with the aim of getting 3,000 female applicants.

Johnson and Officer Fred Bowe are in the Concord area as part of this recruitment. They will be visiting Diablo Valley College, Los Medanos College and will help get media coverage to let women know about a CHP career.

"You have to like to drive," said Johnson, who drives an average of 200 miles a day in Indio near Palm Springs. "You have to think of this as a career, too. This is not just a job."

To qualify as a cadet, women must be between the ages of 20 and 31. They must have excellent vision, be no less than 5-foot-6 and not more than 6-foot-6 inches. A high school diploma or equivalent is also necessary.

The deadline for applying is March 2.

Johnson was part of the first class open to women.

"I applied because I was sitting at a computer by myself in a little room getting weird punching buttons. I wanted a less routine job.

The salary was good too, starting at $1,259 for a cadet and going as high as $1,503.

Her class was made up of 40 men and 40 women, and she was one of 27 women who graduated.

"A lot of physical training is the first thing that sticks out in everyone's mind when they think of the academy," Johnson said.

Women enter the 5-month training session a week early to get a head start on the push-ups, pull-ups and running.

"Most females haven't developed their upper body strength as much as guys have," Johnson commented. "But you'd be surprised. Women physically have a lot of stamina.

Besides intensive physical training there is classroom work.

Johnson's typical day involves writing citations, responding to accidents and watching for drunk drivers.

"The worst part of my job is the routine patrol," she said. "But then there is always the possibility of something happening at any moment."

What can happen to her are the same things that male officers face. A woman officer in Barstow recently had to shoot and kill a man. Women have to respond to dangerous situations and bad accidents.

"What happened the first time I was at an accident with major injuries was that I was so busy I didn't have time to look at the people and say, 'Hey, this looks really bad.'"

"In that respect, there's really no difference in men and women," Johnson commented. "We all feel the same emotions."

One of the interesting things about her job is watching the reactions people have to a woman in uniform.
